600,000 Without a Country Mr. Shaw as Mr. Finnegan To Discourage Aviation You Make Hesosephosphate

—By Arthur Brisbane—

H. R. KNICKERBOCKER, trained newspaper man, writing from Berlin, says:

"Six hundred thousand Jews in Germany today are people without a country. Also, the economic boycott on German Jews, while no longer carried on with physical violence, has deprived 100,000 of a living."

According to Mr. Knickerbocker, all German Jews hope to leave Germany, 3000 have asked for visas, that they may go to Palestine, and there have been many suicides.

The government now ruling in Germany, if it really intends as Mr. Knickerbocker says, to "root out the Jews," will find eventually that it has rooted out other things, including much of Germany's prosperity, success and intelligence.

Spain and Portugal "rooted out the Jews" long ago. And among nations they have amounted to very little since then.

Ladies of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in Minnesota will discourage beer by boycotting "drugstores, groceries and restaurants that sell beer." The ladies will, of course, refrain from drinking beer themselves, and not permit it in their households. That is the right of Americans, and with some, lacking self-control, it is necessary.

But they might remember the advice of the good French bishop, to whom a young priest wrote that he would stop wine-drinking and dancing by peasants on Sunday. The bishop replied: "Do you refrain, and set a good example. But let the poor peasants drink, dance and forget their misery."

George Bernard Shaw, arriving and going, reminds you of the faithful railroad employe, Mr. Finnegan, who had been told to send only brief telegrams. When a car ran off the track, was replaced and went on its way, Mr. Finnegan wired: "Off again, on again, gone again, Finnegan."

George Bernard Shaw, on his way around the world with his wife, and on the home stretch toward England, got off the English ship, Empress of Britain, in New York yesterday, made a speech in the Metropolitan Opera House, and went back to sleep on the ship and sailed for home this morning.

Mr. Shaw, whose professional specialty is wit, calls Americans "Dear Boobs." You will admit that the description is well chosen when you consider that Americans scrapped new battleships and battleships in the building stage to oblige Britain, and lent England and other countries TEN THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS THAT WE ARE NOT GOING TO GET BACK.

Two aviation items: It is suggested that a navy officer, who is NOT a flier, be made chief of the bureau of aeronautics. President Roosevelt will perhaps squelch that suggestion. You wouldn't put in charge of cavalry a man unable to ride a horse, or put a hoptoad in charge of eagles.

Mr. Vinson, head of the House naval affairs committee, wants to curtail drastically the pay of all flying officers in the navy except the lowest paid junior fliers. Any officer paid as much as $2640 a year would get no additional pay during his flying time.

That BILL TO DISCOURAGE FLYING suggests this question:

How much would the average Congressman expect, as additional compensation, if he had to fly as men do in the navy, in all kinds of weather, at frightful "bell-diving" speeds, in dangerous close formation?

This country should economize, undoubtedly, but no economy should be made at the expense of national safety.

Everybody more than eight years old in the United States knows what makes an automobile go. How many know what makes their own bodies go? Dr. Sacks, of the University of Michigan, tells you that under ordinary conditions, our muscles do their work "by burning lactic acid with the oxygen in the blood stream."

In emergencies, when the body needs energy faster than oxygen can be carried to the muscle masses, glycogen, which is animal starch stored in the muscles, "undergoes too quick chemical breakdown." One yields lactic acid, the other hesosephosphate, a compound of glycogen and phosphorous.

Those two breakdowns give the body the necessary "quick pickup." Moller's gentlemen in Fortune was amazed to learn that he had been writing prose all his life without knowing it.

You may be amazed to find that you have been producing

THREATEN SOLOMON WITNESSES

POLICE TAKE PRECAUTION AGAINST TAMPERING

Grand Jury to Hear More Details Today of 'King' Slaying

First hand details of the Cotton Club slaying of Charlie (King) Solomon were due before the Suffolk County grand jury today from the lips of Cotton Club employes who crouched in terror on the fatal morning of January 21.

The witnesses, friends five Negro "guests of the city," whose luxurious protection at Hotel Statler was the subject of a recent controversy over bills between Mayor Curley and Police Commissioner Hultmas.

Waiters, a checkroom girl and others were also ready today, all of them under heavy police guard at the courthouse.

GIRLS STILL MISSING

Three of the four that made up the Solomon party on the fatal morning were still missing as the second day of the jury hearing opened. They are Miss Claire White and Miss Helen Ethridge, night club entertainers, and Joe Solomon, orchestra leader of Cocoanut Grove at the time of racket chief's death.

A surprise turn in the slaying came in reports that Miss White and Miss Ethridge recently were in touch with counsel for John T. O'Donnell, of South Boston, the only one of the six alleged slayers of Solomon in custody. The girls could not be found at New York addresses they left here with police.

Joe Solomon was reported in Boston but failed to report at the Courthouse at the jury opening. He was no relation to the slain man.

Police threw a heavy guard about the Courthouse corridors to prevent the possibility of witness intimidation. They said no attempts had been reported but precaution was considered necessary.

HUNT FOR FIVE OTHERS

Other police still sought the other five members of the alleged slayers' band. The five are James P. "Skeets" Coyne, Frank Karionas, James P. Scully, John Burke and John J. Moore.

Prospects of the five Negro witnesses losing the luxury of their protection at Hotel Statler loomed today as the quintet prepared to testify.

It was indicated by Dist. Atty. William J. Foley that other arrangements for their protection will be made between now and the trial of O'Donnell and any others who are apprehended.

Just what the plans were District Attorney Foley was not prepared to say early today. He intimated, however, that the county would not go to the expense that was borne by the police department.

One of the five, "Al" Brantley, negro master of ceremonies, was first to tell the jury of the actual

Midnight Raid Tale Wins Her Freedom

'President's Day' Plan Praised by Leader

The plan sponsored by the Boston Evening American and other Hearst newspapers to observe Sunday, April 30, throughout the country as "President's Day" has been enthusiastically endorsed by many leading Bostonians, including Mayor Curley, President Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University and Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougher, pastor of Tremont Temple.

Thanksgiving by the people of the United States for the inspiring leadership of President Franklin D. Roosevelt during the first weeks of his administration and prayers for continued good health of the President in his big task of leading the country out of the wilderness of uncertainty are the objects of the movement.

AHEAD OF "RED DAY"

The date selected for "President's Day" is considered singularly appropriate in view of the fact that it immediately precedes May Day on which the Reds are wont to stage their demonstrations against constituted authority.

The religious observance on Sunday, April 30, during which President Roosevelt will be extolled for the firmness and clear sightedness of his policies, together with the offering of prayers for his continued good health, are bound in offset the half-baked and scurrilous attacks that will be forthcoming on the following day from communistic sources. The patriotic effect of "President's Day" will be of immeasurable value in the opinion of many far sighted and public spirited citizens.

PRAISED BY LEADERS

Commenting upon the movement President Marsh of Boston University said: "Anything that tends to make for understanding sympathy of the President and helps to increase respect for his office, is a good thing. Therefore, from the human point of view, the movement is worthwhile. Those who believe in God

Dublin's Railroad Strike Is Settled

Dublin, Irish Free State, April 12 (AP)—The unofficial strike of about 4000 Oriuh Free State railroad workers for higher wages was settled early today.

Termination of the strike came a few hours after 200 locomotive engineers and firemen on the Great Southern line decided to return to work after a three-day layoff.

STATE MOVES TO END STRIKE

Peabody leather manufacturers, strike leaders and the state board of conciliation of arbitration moved today to end the differences that prompted 5000 workers to walk out last week.

Refusal of manufacturers to recognize the National Shoe & Leather Workers' Association, the strikers' union, has blocked all efforts at peace thus far. Union leaders refused to discuss wages until the association was recognized.

The move toward amicable settlement prompted a meeting at the State House today with the manufacturers' side of the controversy due to be told the arbitration board first. Although there is no strike at its plant, the A. C. Lawrence Leather Co., employers of about 1600 persons, today was armed with an injunction against any possible interference from strikers in other plants.

PRESIDENT IS AGAINST BANK GUARANTEE

Roosevelt and Woodin Oppose Provision in Glass Bill

Washington, April 12 (INS) — President Roosevelt's surprising coolness toward a federal guarantee of deposits in Federal Reserve member banks today virtually doomed the new banking reform bill, drafted by the Senate banking and currency committee after a two-year study.

The President opposed present enactment of the guarantee—in the form of an "insurance fund"—during a conference with Secretary of the Treasury Woodin and Senator Glass (D.) of Virginia, author of the bill. Later, it was announced at the White House that Mr. Roosevelt had an "open mind" on the subject but Congressional leaders declared he had expressed opposition to the deposit guarantee.

AGREES WITH WOODIN

Aside from this, the President was opposed to legalizing branch banking by member banks in states, granting the privilege to state banks. Mr. Roosevelt also was reported as coinciding with Secretary Woodin's opposition to prohibiting payment of interest on demand deposits, and to divorcing banks from their business affiliates within five years.

With the President and his Treasury head opposed to the four major provisions of the new reform bill, it appeared the measure had little chance of enactment.

SURPRISE TO GLASS

Glass told his colleagues privately he had sponsored the guarantee of bank deposits only at the President's suggestion. He could advance no reason for the President's purported change of attitude.

Thee guarantee would be established through an "insurance fund" to be administered by a new federal liquidating corporation. The Treasury would pay $150,000,000 into the fund while Federal reserve banks would contribute one-fourth of their surplus and member banks a sum equal to one-half of one per cent of their total deposits. Any closed bank could draw from this fund a sum equal to its losses, thus guaranteeing the depositors against all losses.

MAY DIE IN COMMITTEE

Secretary Woodin was pictured as fighting the provision for divorcing national banks from all business affiliates Woodin was said to favor this measure, only if incorporated in a separate bill. Congressional leaders charged this was only a method of defeating the "divorce" since it could not be enacted separately.

Woodin's opposition to strict regulation of banking directorships also surprised congressional leaders. The bill would limit each bank to not less than five nor more than 25 directors, each of whom would have to own $2000 of the bank's stock, and none of whom could be directors in any stock-selling corporation.

It appeared the bill would be killed i ncommittee unless the President compromised, the differences.

Hanging a Woman!

RUTH JUDD, convicted murderess in Arizona, tried to commit suicide in her cell, and was prevented from doing so by the authorities, who proudly published the fact.

Why do civilized or semi-civilized people interfere with a suicide in order to have the savage satisfaction of hanging a woman?

Let us assume that Ruth Judd is a murderess, and was properly convicted. This seems entirely probable.

Let us assume that she lies when she says that she killed in self-defense.

Let us assume the worst phases of the case are proved, or at least not disproved.

Still, what is to be gained by subjecting a woman to the horrible, brutal, savage death penalty of hanging?

Can we say it has a deterrent effect upon other criminals?

Apparently not, because in the states where they have no death penalty there are no more murders than in the states where they have death penalties.

Furthermore, in all history horrible punishments have not prevented crime. They have merely brutalized the community or given evidence of an already brutalized community.

* * *

THE ancient penalties of boiling in oil and flaying alive have been abandoned, but hanging still persists as a survival of savagery.

If the woman is a menace to the community, she would remove that menace by suicide, and why prevent her from removing that menace in order to preserve her and hang her to satisfy our savage instincts?

Does the State set a Christian example by committing murder for murder, when Christ taught his followers to abandon the ancient, brutal and brutalizing policy of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth?

Does the State set a civilized example in committing murder for murder?

The woman murdered in a frenzy of anger or jealousy or fear or hatred.

She had been raised by a good Christian family; she had been a harmless person during her life, apparently law-abiding; but overcome by some storm of emotion she committed murder.

But the State murders in cold blood, and it murders with deliberation, premeditation and intent to kill—and it murders as cruelly and brutally as any murderer can, and finally it insists upon killing with savage methods rather than allowing the woman to put herself out of the way.

* * *

THE State kills not as a deterrent, for there is no more of a deterrent in hanging than there was in flaying or boiling in oil.

The State kills in the unchristian, uncivilized spirit of revenge, and insists upon killing in the savage and cruel way that will satisfy that vindictive spirit of revenge.

Is it not about time for modern states to emerge from the dark ages and discard the customs of the dark ages?

Gov. Ely to Throw First Ball at Wigwam Opener

Rain threatened this morning to postpone until tomorrow the opening of the National League season, slated for Braves Field this afternoon with the Boston Braves tackling the New York Giants. Weather forecasts were for continued cloudy, rainy weather for today at least.

By JOE CASHMAN

And, in accordance with time-honored custom, Uncle Samuel's children, from the President down, toss aside their many cares and worries for the afternoon and flock to the ball parks to watch their 16 major league clubs success on the start of another 154-game campaign.

Boston's rendezvous is at Braves Field, where, at 3 p. m., Bill McKechnie's batting Braves and Will Terry's colorful New York Giants perform the local ballyhooing before a crowd of 25,000, including Governor Ely, the acting mayor, their staffs, members of the City Council, and countless other leaders in political, civic and military circles.

POMP AND CIRCUMSTANCE

The traditional pomp and ceremony will attend the inaugural at the flag-bedecked Wigwam. The parade of the players to the flagpole for the hoisting of Old Glory to the chilly breezes, the opening battery act of the governor and music by Jimmy Coughlin's 101st regiment band have been arranged by the Tribal management.

Good weather only, doubtful at this writing, is needed to make the party at the Tepee a howling success. The forecast is showers, which, if true, would spoil everything until tomorrow.

SHAW HITS HOLLYWOOD, CONSTITUTION, BANKERS

BUT GRANTS THAT AMERICA MAY SAVE THE HUMAN RACE

New York, April 12 (INS)—George Bernard Shaw, political prophet, social surgeon, and philosophical showman, today chalked up another notch on his gun.

The Irish playright had fired a brilliant Shavian barrage at close range into the American people in his first and only address in this country.

While the Statue of Liberty averted her face to the infidel cabin aboard the liner Empress of Britain, occupied by the world's first scoffer, he prepared to sail for home at noon today.

"You put up in New York harbor a monstrous idol which you called 'Liberty.' And there it is, and the only thing that remains to complete that statue is to put on its pedestal the inscription: 'All hope abandon ye who enter here.'"

JOSHES HOLLYWOOD

Shaw analyzed the evolution of an American, termed all human animals anarchists at heart, flogged the American Constitution, but granted that the American nation might save the human race.

He joshed at Hollywood, although rating sex appeal an admirable quality; and recommended Communism, his pet political hobby-horse, as well as a revolution for the United States.

For the most part, the world-famous critic with the picturesque beard dispensed with the epigrams for which he is popularly famous far more than for his profundity of thought.

It was a provocative, but serious, address. It was mellowed with whimsical phrases rather than spiced with the bite which in the past accompanied the shavian bark.

It had less Shavian paradoxes running through it and more of the human charity for which the noted writer displays to his intimates. Of course, the audience, come to hear a show rather than to hear a discourse on political science, laughed frequently in the wrong places.

WIPING OUT DEBTS

But when Shaw concluded his historic digest of the world's ills, a Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey or George M. Cohan, could not have received a more enthusiastic outburst of applause.

Shaw suggested a new constitution for the United States, to be based upon its modern needs, advocated wiping off all war debts, nationalizing the banks and destroying the power of our financiers.

He called on the United States to lead the way in saving present civilization from going the road to ruin of previous civilizations.

He pictured the 100 per cent American of the past as being supplanted by a new type. This type might develop into a "100 per cent statesman" and pull the world out of the ditch, he said.

"I think Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt is a type of that, rather," said Shaw. "I think my friend, Mr. William Randolph Hearst, is rather a type of it. The reason I mention these two gentlemen is not only because they are pretty good specimens of what I mean but because the symptom of the change is that they are both very violently against the Constitution."

THRUSTS AT BANKERS

Shaw warned that President Roosevelt, by the end of his term would be as "great a disappointment as Mr. Hoover," unless he was able to govern without interference from Congress and the Constitution.

Shaw sat on the platform between Jackson E. Reynolds, president of the First National Bank of the City of New York, who presided, and Thomas W. Lamont, partner of J. P. Morgan & Co.

"The financiers live in a world of absolute illusion," said Shaw. "They have created something which they call the capital of the country which has no existence whatever. Every $5 they count as $100, and that means that every financier, every banker, every stock broker is 95 per cent a lunatic.

"And yet it is in the hands of these lunatics that you leave the whole fate of your country, and

Memorial for Father Farrell

Washington, April 12 (AP)—Permission for Yankee Division veterans to place in the veterans' hospital at Bedford, Mass., a memorial to the late Rev. William J. Farrell, war-time Yankee Division chaplain, has been promised by Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs.

Rep. Rogers, of Massachusetts, recently forwarded to Hines the petition of the Hudson, Mass., American Legion post to commemorate the name of the Massachusetts priest who devoted years to work among the veterans of his state.

Hines replied that while it was contrary to procedure to place memorial tablets in veterans' hospitals, he would consent to the hanging or a suitably framed memorial to Fr. Farrell "as a fitting memorial to his own brave deeds and to his many sacrifices for his fellowmen."

you also give them amazing power which exists in all large and rich societies."

Shaw outlined Hollywood as the center of "an abominably moral propaganda." He said this condition made the film center one of the most immoral places in the world.

"But this is not realized," he said, "because the moment you mention, apparently, to an American the word 'immoral,' he immediately begins to think of ladies' skirts or stockings or something of that kind. He begins to think you are talking of that very admirable thing, sex appeal, the use of which in the theater and in the cinema is very important, provided it is well done and that sex appeal is really educational, which it can be.

"The real thing with which you are corrupting the world is the anarchism of Hollywood. There you put a string of heroes in front of people and all of them are anarchists, and the one answer to anything annoying or to any breach of law or to any expression which he considers unmanly, is to give the other person a sock in the jaw . . .

"When will we see a fil mmaking from Hollywood in which the hero, instead of socking the gentleman in the jaw, does the civilized thing and calls the policeman?"

MIGHT SAVE WORLD

Shaw stressed the hope that American might have the ability to save the world from destruction.

"America has got this curious thing in itself, this wonderful thing, this surging thing inside that you don't meet in the same way elsewhere, and will that carry it through? . . .

"I really do entertain a hope—I think I am the only person in the world who entertains it so far. After my preaching tonight some of you may begin to entertain it but I do begin to think that it is possible that America, in spite of all the follies of the past, instead of your ridiculous Uncle Jonathan, instead of your ridiculous 100 per cent American, you are really coming to the point in which America may take the lead and possibly help to save the world."

Shaw said that the Communistic experiment in Russia had been saved through the industrial and mechanical aid rendered by American engineers. He said that America did not realize how fortunate it was in having Russia Communistic instead of supporting imperial capitalism.

Officer at Tech Assigned to Fort

Washington, April 12 (AP)—The War Department announced that First Lieut. Floyd A. Mitchell, Coast Artillery Corps, would be relieved from duty as a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on completion of his course and assigned to the 11th Field Artillery at Fort Wright, New York.

OLD "G. B." POINTS THE WAY

Attacking the theory of liberty as followed in this country, George Bernard Shaw, famed Irish showman of philosophy, declared in New York last night that all the Statue of Liberty lacked was a sign reading "Abandon Hope All Ye Who Enter Here." The playwright is shown above in three characteristic poses, snapped on the liner Empress of Britain. At the top he is shown leaving the elevator on the liner; in the center at the breakfast table as he reads one of the many wires received by him and at the bottom, chatting with one of the stewards. Barbs and Bouquets for U. S. From Shaw's N. Y. Speech

(By the Associated Press)

Many barbs, plus a bouquet or two, characterized George Bernard Shaw's maiden speech to Americans in New York. Here are a few highlights:

"The only thing that remains to complete that monstrous idol, the Statue of Liberty, is to put on its pedestal the inscription 'All hope abandon ye who enter here!'

"Hollywood is one of the most immoral places in the world. . . . There you put a string of heroes in front of people and all of them are anarchists, and the one answer to anything annoying . . . is to give the other person a sock in the jaw."

"Mr. President Roosevelt is appealing to you, practically, to get rid of your confounded Constitution to give him power to govern the country."

"America, in spite of all the follies of the past, may take the lead and help to save the world."

"The employers of today belongs to the proletaria. He is an employed manager. . . . The financiers are the present masters of the situation."

"Your financier gets the terrible habit of multiplying all the resources of the country by 20. He says of every man who has $5 a year, 'that man is worth $100,' but he isn't . . . the financier lives in a world of absolute illusion. He is 95 per cent a lunatic."

"The first thing that you have got ot do to get out of your present mess is to nationalize your banks."

"I came here firmly resolved that not a single word should pass my lips which could give the slightest offense to any American."

AKRON GIRDERS SNAPPED 'LIKE MATCHES'

Lakehurst, N. J., April 12 (INS)—Mystery still shrouded the cause of the Akron disaster as the naval court of inquiry entered its third session today with technical witnesses scheduled to take the stand.

Five witnesses so far have been heard. Three of them might well be characterized as the "star" witnesses for they were the only survivors . . . Lieut. Commander Herbert V. Wiley and two enlisted men, Richard E. Deal and Moody C. Erwin. The other two were radio operators at the Lakehurst naval air station.

The salient facts the naval board has learned are these:

When the Akron crashed into the sea with a loss of 73 lives in an electrical storm eight days ago, the tail of the dirigible hit the water first.

The last downward plunge came with lightning-like suddenness from an altitude of 1000 feet. It required only three minutes from the time the Akron started dropping until it struck the water. On the way down girders with, in the ship snapped.

What caused the disaster none of the witnesses could say. The best they could do was to express an opinion.

WILEY'S OPINION WEIGHTY

Lieut. Commander Wiley's opinion seemed to carry weight with those who listened to his testimony. He thought a downcurrent of air carried the dirigible to its doom.

Erwig told of the girders breaking during the descent. To him the ship seemed to be breaking up aft.

"It was like stepping on a box of penny matches," was the way Erwin described it.

Deal said the engines were running during the fall but they "died funny" when the ship struck the water.

The two radio operators, working at the Lakehurst station while the Akron was off on its fatal voyage, had little information to give, other than explain how difficult it was to contact the dirigible by radio in view of the storm. Robert L. Hill, who was on duty until midnight, said the last message from the Akron came at 7:45 p. m., or four hours and 45 minutes before the Akron went down.

WILL VIEW WRECKAGE

Andrew W. Winters, the operator who relieved him at midnight was unable to "raise" the Akron at all, because static conditions were "very bad."

Wreckage of the Akron was to be viewed today by the naval board. Two trucklonads have been brought to Lakehurst and is stored in the marine barracks. It comprises twisted debris washed up by the Atlantic off Barnegat Light, where the Akron crashed. There are sections of broken duralumin girders, pieces of heating pipe and parts of the fabric of the giant dirigible.

Edward Schneberger, of the University of Wisconsin, makes an announcement, one that will mean much to the food supply in future years, when this country will have a population bigger than that of the entire world at present.

"Fertilization of lakes and streams," as proved by experiments made in fish ponds, can increase magically the growth of fishes. Living in "fertilized water," a big-mouth bass can be grown to a length of 11 inches in one year. Ordinarily the fish takes five years to grow 10 inches long. Scientific destruction of sharks and other worthless fish that destroy good fish may eventually cause oceans, lakes and rivers to be overcrowded. Earth's oceans could feed easily a thousand times the present human population of the world.

Jules Piccard, father of Dr. Augusta Piccard, who went up ten miles into the stratosphere, higher above the earth than any human being had ever gone, is dead at the age of 93.

The aged and learned man, who has taught chemistry at the University of Ezale for 40 years, will be welcomed in Heaven because of his useful life and work. He will also be able to say to the other angels: "My son, Auguste, came nearer to this place than anybody ever did, without coming all the way."

Of importance to newspaper publishers and owners of fir tree forests in the State of Washington is the news that 35-year-old fir trees can be used to make white newsprint paper. This will make possible a crop of fir every 15 years, instead of every 40 years, while preserving forests and their usefulness by scientific management.

The State of Georgia is interested in the manufacture of newsprint and other fine white paper from young pine trees, under scientific forestry.

Only 10 days of life remain for the slender, blonde woman, sentenced to hang April 21 for murder of Agnes Anne Laral, spinster counsel finds a means of staying the hangman's hand.

Warden A. G. Walker, who ordered the death watch posted said Mrs. Judd was not aware of it and that because of her nervous condition, at times approaching hysteria, he would not have her removed to the death cell. She is confined in a small adobe room in the women's ward of the prison. A 24-hour guard was ordered several weeks ago after Mrs. Judd sawed through one of the bars across the window of her cell. The death watch now on duty augments the previous guard.

Warden Walker still was undecided, he said, whether he would as a sanity hearing for Mrs. Judd —possibly the only remaining means by which she may be spared the march to the gallows a week from Friday.

TRIBUTE WILL BE PAID JUDGE

Gov. Ely, members of the judiciary and leaders of bar and state will pay tribute Monday night at the Copley-Plaza to Senator Joseph W. Monahan of Belmont, recently appointed judge of probate in Middlesex County.

In addition to Gov. Ely the speakers' list includes Eriand F. Fish, president of the Senate; James Roosevelt, son of President Roosevelt; Judge Thomas W. Dolan of Suffolk probate court; Judge John J. Burns of superior court and others.

Rev. Dr. Brougher, pastor of Tremont Temple said: "I pray for the President of the United States during every Sunday service and mention him by name. I heartily approve of the plan of the Hearst newspapers for 'President's Day,' April 30, when the people of this country may offer prayers and show their confidence in President Roosevelt in a practical way. I have been reading with interest the action and its officials regularly, even during the recent banking holiday.

"PRESIDENT'S DAY"

"Neither fear nor scurrilous attacks on the President and Congress will get us anywhere. I think clergymen of all denominations will be in accord and gladly participate in the movement to pray that the President may lead us out of the wilderness."

HITLER ENVOYS HONORED BY POPE PIUS

Von Papen, Goering Received by Pontiff Privately

Rome, April 12 (AP)—Vice-Chancellor von Papen and Capt. Hermann Goering, German government leaders, were received in separate audiences by Pope Pius today.

Formal honors were accorded the vice-chancellor and Frau von Papen by prelates and the Vatican Swiss Guards. Baron von Papen was in full dress evening clothes and his decoration as papal knight of the Cape and Sword.

He was presented to the Pope by the counsellor of the German delegation at the Holy See.

Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss of Austria was to be received today by Premier Mussolini. The simultaneous visit here of Austrian and German statesmen still lacked official explanation.

The Germans, Baron Von Papen and his cabinet colleague, Capt. Hermann Goering, were received by Mussolini yesterday and later attended a dinner for the premier given by the German ambassador, Ulrich Von Hassell.

Capt. Goering followed the Von Papens before the Pope. After an interval of half an hour, Capt. Goering arrived in an Italian government automobile bearing the Hitler Swastika flag. This was the first time the German Fascist banner officially entered Vatican City. He was given similar honors to those accorded the Von Papens.

The Von Papens' audience with the Pope last one-half hour. The Pope presented Frau Von Papen a gold and coral rosary and her husband a gold Holy Year medal. The vice-chancellor said he was most satisfied and particularly pleased by the Pope's cordiality.

$100,000 BAIL IN DOPE TRIAL

Montreal, Que., April 12 (AP)—Application for lower bail on behalf of Harry Davis, who is charged with defrauding the customs department of about $500,000 on the importation of 30,000 ounces of narcotics, was refused in Superior Court. Bail was fixed at $100,000.

Castinet Clicking Teeth Long's Exhibit

Washington, April 12—Clicking a set of false teeth like castinets, Sen. Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, told a startled Senate today they were evidence of the dire needs of the veterans.

Senator Long

"This veteran and me his teeth stating that since his compensation was cut off he had no use for them. He suggested I give them to a senator who still had money to buy food."

Ishbel to Watch Over Father on Visit Here

London, April 12—Miss Ishbel MacDonald, hostess for her father, Prime Minister MacDonald, is going to be his personal event when they sail for America Saturday.

She revealed she is determined to continue to exercise her rigid guardianship of her father's health on the forthcoming trip, particularly as much as possible from overwork. This is a task she has assumed in recent years.

TEST SHOWS BEER KICK

Bottle Duel Ends With Brew Victor in 10 Bottle Radius

By his own admission, Win Brooks, of the Boston Evening American staff, was wrapped up behind the eight ball by Paul Whelton of the Boston Evening American staff in four-hour scientific test of the 3.2 beer, engaged in by them yesterday afternoon at Warmuth's restaurant to decide whether it is a drink for softies or a drink for newspapermen. Both decided it was a pretty potent drink after the 10th bottle—or maybe you heard them on the radio. Both had visions of drinking case after case at the paper's expense, however . . . Anyway . . . anyway . . . that beer's a pretty sturdy drink.

By WIN BROOKS

BOTTLE ONE—This is supposed to be a chronological beer drinking bout—the bout of the century—although I doubt very much if P. Whelton, who is the counterpart of P. Whiteman before the latter's lettuce diet, will be able to keep up with me. One pretzel demolished, but no reaction from this first bottle. Many visitors. M. Birge says it's the assignment of the century, and how does it feel to be a guinea pig?

• • •

JUST A FRIENDLY CALL

BOTTLE TWO—Second bottle and second pretzel. Managing editor pays a visit and drinks two bottles. Should have been in this test. Ben Gershon arrives and says Whelton doesn't look very well, having bet on me. But that's right, he doesn't look very well. I am wonderful. Newcomb E. Thompson radio editor, pops in to say he hopes we'll be able to go on at 7. Paul may not be. I am wonderful. Very pleasant atmosphere, but feel nothing.

• • •

BOTTLE THREE—No pretzel. Very little lift. The conversation, with evil-minded kibitzers, shifts to cockroaches in the old Woodcock and similar choice spots of navy bean stew. Kibitzers trying to pan party. Very disparaging note from managing editor of Daily Record. Says he will stack Record office boys up against us. Heigh, ho, lack-a-day, what've we got to lose—Paul? I am swell.

• • •

BOTTLE FOUR—No pretzels. I do feel a very grand lift—like somebody boosting when you're trying to climb a fence. My boy friend is sporting one of those Atlantic City week-end blushes—a startling indoor tan. Tipsters crowd around to whisper how to win the bout: carnival sandwiches with raw meat between rye bread. I am still swell but I'm not sure about Paul.

• • •

ON WINGS OF SPRING

BOTTLE FIVE—Spring is here. One fly arrived on the sipper. Whelton says he noticed it after last bottle, leaping high, but I am staking the claim. Fly departed, giving us scant attention. Whelton asks, "What is this, Warmuth's? But I'm great. Third pretzel and they're all right.

• • •

I draw a warm bottle of beer and he puns again: "You got a warm-uth." That's a bad sign for him.

I feel swell. The lift is better. There are a lot of bottles on the table but some of them belong to the kibitzers. Finish third pretzel.

• • •

BOTTLE SEVEN — Indications are that Whelton is fading. Judd Gray, in charge, arrives and asks us to shift to less conspicuous booth because of supper hour is approaching. I know I'm not to blame, but I can be righteously indignant. We shift.

• • •

BOTTLE EIGHT—Whelton just played the chimes on the dead soldiers like, he says, an old waltz used to play them at Locke's. I will try that a bit.

I asked Paul: "Do you feel it?" and he said, "Do I?" So don't let him tell you he didn't.

The kibitzers have eaten all the pretzels again. I am still feeling great, but I am not so sure about Paul.

• • •

BOTTLE NINE—Kibitzers are scaling hats at hat trees, failing to preserve decorum. I get Bram Stoker evil eye from kibitzer backing my every 32 waist against Paul's 42. In some manner Paul has got one-half glass ahead of me while I was making a phone call. Between you and I and the well known lamp post, I do feel plenty. There is a very slight argument over the Sonnenberg suit at this stage. He is a wrestling bug. But I'm still swell.

• • •

"HITCH" SEEKS A SEAT

BOTTLE TEN—Warmuth pops in to say he got a phone call from Lionel Hitchman, who wants to join the bout, but that outfit Whelton is carrying can toss a mean body check. Paul's left eye-lid is fluttering, according to his own admission, and he claims both of mine are fluttering. I don't feel exactly natural. I have (a very grave feeling that P. Whelton, with that low window jutting into Gershon str., is going to rack up and spot me behind the eight ball. But I can't help it. I'm certainly not drunk. I'm certainly not cold sober. It is very, very possible I am slightly intoxicated. I feel very, very rosey. Without a rest and a meal I couldn't finish this bottle. Paul has beaten me. I fear, but I have a funny feeling that I've got to hold him on my lap (gather round, boys) for that final radio broadcast. The beer is good, and if you drink enough of it—if I drink enough of it—it is plenty strong.

By PAUL WHELTON

In all fairness, I can say that I defeated Win Brooks decisively and squarely, because he left most of his fight under the table.

I will stand here—or, I should say I am sitting here—but at any rate I am here to declare that I stand ready to defend my title against any man outside the hours of 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

WHALE OF A CONTEST

Or if you want to be nasty about it, make it 9:07 a. m. to 5 p. m., because the managing editor, who will have to pay for this stern test unitmately if he hasn't yet, knows that sometimes the clock in our lovely office is inclined to be fast, especially before the noon hour.

It was a great contest, boys and girls, and I enjoyed it immensely except for climbing up and down the stairs at frequent intervals way over in the far corner because they had just put beer on draught and we wanted to see how the pressure was.

In case you don't know about it yet, another American chap and myself, in dual moments of weakness (isn't it a marvel how that guy finds the keys) consented to try out this new 3.2 beer, bottle by bottle, to see how far one could go before:

1—Getting the telephone habit
2—Wanting to go somewhere.
3—Getting to sleep and not being able to go anywhere.
4—Deciding not to go to work because you hated everybody.

RIGHT OVER THE FOAM

They were reactions the managing editor wanted.

"It's reactions I want," he said firmly, "and I will have reaction if I have nothing else."

Then he had a couple of glasses himself and felt the better for it.

"Trimming it down to facts, I can tell you right over the foam that on three bottles of the new brew, Win Brooks had to call up something, I was perfect.

On five bottles, Win had to go over and talk with a couple of fellows at another table.

On six bottles he told us about finding a cockroach in a chicken croquette back a few years in a Boston spoon spot which was not, of course, the scene of combat, Warmuth's in Devonshire st.

I was perfect. I only told them a few slight facts about the wormy breakfast food we used to get at the aviation concentration camp at Camp Dick, Dallas, Tex.—but no one paid any attention to me.

I'll around the eighth bottle, Judd Gray, the major domo, became nervous and moved us over into a secluded spot back of the kitchen. Brooks was weakening and he took only two bits out of a chicken sandwich, saying it tasted "funny after the beer."

BROOKS WEAKENS

I had had 10 pretzels and three walks around and had seen a member of our staff in a booth with a beautiful lady, I was perfect.

Half way through the ninth bottle, Brooks, the fiendish angler, weakened and failed to angle out after the bottle of ale, his glass, He withered visibly at any mention of the idle chicken sandwich. This was at 5:10 or one hour and 45 minutes after we kicked the first caps off of the first bottles I was perfect and I ate the other half of the chicken sandwich and went into my 10th bottle.

JUST ADDING SCIENCE

The kibitzers were thick by that time, even a few funny fellows from the Boston Daily Record, who handed us formal challenges—their best man to meet the winner.

We told them proudly that this was not a vulgar joust, but a scientific test, and that we had made the discovery that the new 3.2 per cent beer was a potent beverage.

"Even if you whispered it, I would know," said one of the kibitzers, posing under the name of Gershon, as he looked at Brooks.

I was then on my 11th bottle, and I was perfect, but Brooks had all the appearance of an old, second-hand piece of lettuce.

Tommy Thompson split the 11th bottle with me, but only because we had to be escorted back to the office, and go on the air at 7 p. m., from the Boston Evening American studio over Station WAAB.

I held Win Brooks in my lap while we broadcast. I was perfect.

KIND TO STRANGERS

As for the summing up:

One bottle in the morning, without eating, cures that thing.

Two bottles with lunch at noon—if you can take it like a major all morning—will do the same.

Two bottles anytime, as a conviviality, will warm you.

Four bottles taken on the same way will expand your graciousness.

Beyond that—well, you're liable to do what Win Brooks did when the broadcast was all over. He suggested that for peace sake, I go home to his house and to Cath, and he would go to mine and tell Marian because women, although holding bitterness in their hearts, are always kind to strangers.

THE LATE KING SOLOMON

The Suffolk county grand jury is delving into killing of Charles "King" Solomon. He was shot at the Cotton Club. The police claim that six men participated in robbery and killing of Solomon. One has been apprehended. He is John T. O'Donnell. Above you see Capt. Stephen Flaherty of Station 10 and Special Officer Edward Kirby (on right) with hats and coats and many other articles picked up after the shooting at the Cotton Club. They are for the grand jury.

LICENSE FEES CUT NEEDED, HE SAYS

Robart Says Cent an Ounce Fair Price for Beer

Reduction of local license fees and less anxiety of retailers to secure a large profit were cited today by State Commr. Ralph Robart as the means of securing a lower priced glass of beer.

After a day of personal inquiry into the beer price situation Robart, who was investigating as chairman of the Necessaries of Life Commission, decided that local license fees needed adjustment. He also declared that retailers were trying to get too much profit on the new brew.

PRAISES BREWERS

He will continue his investigations into the price situation and expects to devote his attentions to wholesalers of beer.

In connection with his probe of the situation, he paid high tribute to Boston brewers, who, he declared, were making no attempt to profiteer in beer, although they could dispose of it at almost any price at the present time.

Commenting on what he believes the solution of the problem of providing the general public with a 5-cent glass of beer, Robart pointed out that both solutions involved the retailers of the beverage.

He declared the license fees being paid by retailers were quite high. He declared they were paying fees running from $200 to $300 which he asserted was a lot of money unless they sold a large volume of beer.

"New York is charging from nothing up to $25," he said. "The latter is the highest fee paid by the same class of retailers.

"It is for this reason that I believe the committees should either reduce their fees or grade them according to the volume of business done.

"License fees must be cut and figured to fit the volume of sales, if the poor man is going to have

SENATOR'S SON IN DEATH LEAP

Washington, April 12 (AP)—Paul B. King, 38-year-old son of Senator William H. King, of Utah, plunged from a seventh floor window of the Blackstone Hotel here and was instantly killed.

Clerks at the hotel said King had registered there about a week ago. He is survived by a widow and a 12-year-old daughter.

Whether King fell or jumped from the window could not be learned. Hotel employes said they knew little about the tragedy except that his body was found in an alley behind the hotel, underneath his seventh floor window.

He was dead when the body was discovered.

Revenue Increase Spurs Race to Join Wet Parade

Massachusetts cities and towns were still adding their communities to the lists of those issuing licenses for the sale of beer today, while others were taking steps to secure such action in the immediate future.

The sight of many cities and towns securing a large amount of revenue, which will aid in balancing their budgets, has influenced many communities to join the wet parade.

The situation in various cities and towns today is:

BREWSTER—Special meeting tomorrow to decide on sale.

BROOKLINE—BEER!

DANVERS—BEER!

HYANNIS—Selectmen of nearby Cape towns to meet here to hear arguments for sale of beer.

LYNN—Licenses to be issued Saturday.

LYNNFIELD—BEER!

TAUNTON—BEER!

WAKEFIELD—BEER!

WALTHAM—BEER!

WATERTOWN—Licenses is sued tomorrow for sale Friday.

BRITAIN PLANS SOVIET BAN

London, April 12 (AP)—On the eve of the trial in Moscow of six British electoral engineers, the House of Lords adopted a bill enabling the government to invoke an embargo against Soviet imports.

The engineers are charged with sabotage, bribery and espionage—accusations which on conviction carry a maximum penalty of death.

Lord Hailsham, minister for war, piloted the bill through the upper House this evening. Emphasizing that the government did not want to be forced to put the power of the bill into effect, Lord Hailsham indicated his belief the engineer had been ill treated.

During the last week five of them have been free on bail.

MAN DIES IN N. Y. FIRE

New York, April 12 (AP)—Fire in a four-story Broadway building that houses the Strand Theater, took one life, sent the audience of 2200 scurrying to the street, paralyzed traffic in busy Times sq. and sent two huge electrical signs crashing to the pavement.

The body of Joseph Kraus, 30, an electrician, was found in a closet on the top floor, where the fire started. Apparently he had groped his way into the closet through the smoke, thinking the door led to an exit.

Thousands gathered to watch the fire, although little could be seen except fire engines and hose lines stretched across car tracks. The Strand audience walked out with a minimum of disorder, although one woman fainted. The theater was not damaged.

Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy, after questioning witnesses, expressed opinion the fire started from the sparks of acetylene torches used by workmen who were dismantling a sign on the roof.

FIVE SELECTED BY LOWELL

The first five men, who will become members of the Harvard "scholars' paradise" in the recently formed Society of Fellows, were named by President A. Lawrence Lowell, after being approved by the Harvard Corporation.

The five who will assume their fellowships next fall to form the nucleus of the society, are: Garrett Birkhoff of Cambridge, Harvard; John Chester Miller of Tacoma, Wash., Harvard; Willard Van Orman Quine of Akron, O., Oberlin; Burthus Frederick Skinner of Scranton, Pa.; Hamilton, and Frederick Mundell Watkins of Providence, R. I., Harvard.

Further appointments to the society will be made next year. The plan calls for the group to be ultimately made up of not more than 24 young men, who give promise of notable individual contribution to knowledge and thought.

Giggle at Aviator O. K. With Court

New York, April 12—The law in its cold dispassionate way decided an actress may giggle at an aviator.

Ethel Jane Walker, who has been seen in Earl Carroll productions, was the actress in the case. Nor man Whiteside was the aviator.

Miss Walker is suing Whiteside for $50,000 for alleged breach of promise. Whiteside caused the young woman's arrest on a charge of disorderly conduct. Said he:

"Several times, as I walked through a hotel lobby she pointed me out to a friend of hers and giggled loudly."

The case was dismissed.

Connecticut Asks Quota Be Increased

Washington, April 12 (AP)—Edward H. Reeves, a member of the Connecticut unemployment commission, discussed with Labor Department officials methods of raising the state's quota for the forest conservation program.

The number of men to be recruited from Connecticut has not been determined definitely, but preliminary estimates give the total as 3250.

Regulations for Skiers Is Urged

Banff, Alta, April 11 (AP)—A recommendation that the federal Parks department draft strict regulations governing skiing expeditions from all camps was made by a coroner's jury which investigated the death of R. A. E. C. Paley, a research fellow in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The jury found that Dr. Paley had come to his death through misadventure on Saturday while trying to traverse a steep snow slope on Fossil mountain near here.

Indian Leader Released

Poona, India, April 12 (AP)—Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, poetess and Indian Nationalist Congress leader, who was sentenced in December to one year's imprisonment was released today.

Taxicab Overturns in Back Bay Crash

A taxicab was overturned in a collision with another auto at Exeter and Marlboro sts., Back Bay, early today, but the operators of both machines escaped injury.

The taxicab, operated by Abraham Thompson of Worcester st., South End, was northbound in Exeter st. when it was in collision with a light sedan travelling eastward on Marlboro st.

Two Boston Naval Officers in Orders

Washington, April 11 (AP)—Navy orders today included: Comdr. Samuel S. Payne, Naval War College, Newport, R. I., to Army War College, Washington.

Beer at Last for Brockton Folks

Brockton, Mass., April 12 (AP)—The drought in Brockton has ended. The liquor license board issued 19 licenses for the sale of beer and the 3.2 brew was on sale today.

Cregg Bars Way to Compromise in Costello Poison Trial

Rumors that Mrs. Jessie B. Costello of Peabody would enter a plea to a lesser charge than that of murder drew statements from both prosecution and defense today that there would be no "compromise" when the trial is reached in June.

Charged with the murder of her husband, Fire Capt. William J. Costello, Mrs. Costello will fight every inch of the way for absolute freedom, her counsel announced.

Mrs. Costello will face a charge of first degree murder and nothing else, was the decision of Dist.-Atty. Hugh A. Cregg.

"The report that there is a good possibility of compromise being reached in the Costello case is without foundation," Cregg said.

"There is no agreement or compromise in this case. I have not suggested it, and will not make such a suggestion. Defense counsel have not approached me or attempted to sound me out, either.

"Mrs. Costello is in good physical condition, according to reports from the county jail, and unless something entirely unexpected comes up, we will move to trial early in June."

Defense counsel was equally emphatic in announcement that no move was anticipated by Mrs. Costello.

MRS. ROOSEVELT BOOSTS UNION

New York, April 12 (AP) Advising better organization among workers and employers, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt gave her active support here to the campaign of the Women's Trade Union League against sweatshop conditions in the dress industry.

Knitting on a white wool scarf during the meeting, Mrs. Roosevelt emphasized her activity was "as an individual and not as the wife of the President."

The lecture is one in which Mrs. Roosevelt has interested herself for several years.

"I am a practical person," said the mistress of the White House, "and I wonder how you are going to get at the mass of the women to awaken in them the interest to bring about success for your undertaking. Employers are interested in favorable working conditions because they know if wages sink so low workers cannot buy, then employers lose their markets."

Students Protest Ban on Walks

Pity the pupils of Cambridge High and Latin school. They cannot stray away from the school area during recess.

School officials said they anticipated no trouble, even though they planned to ignore the demands of the pupils.

New Cabinet in Portugal Formed

Lisbon, Portugal, April 12 (AP)—Premier Antonio De Oliveira Salazar presenting the resignation of his cabinet and was immediately charged with forming the first government under Portugal's new constitution, which ends seven years of dictatorial rule. The new cabinet is the same as the old with two exceptions. President Oscar Carmona remains as the chief executive.

Bee Causes Death

Stockton, Cal., April 12 (AP)—A bee, flying into her auto caused the death of Mrs. Howard L. Olsen, 35, of Oakland. Confused, she swerved her car and struck a tree.

ADAMS DIVORCE CONTEST LOOMS

Three children of George Carlton Adams, society polo-ist and Boston business man, were given into temporary custody of his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Adams, Brookline society matron, when Adams announced he would contest a divorce suit filed in Salem court by Mrs. Adams.

Mrs. Adams, who maintained a summer place at Hamilton, filed the divorce action last December, but legal notice was not served upon Adams until last week. He immediately filed notice of the contest.

In her plea for the temporary custody of the children, Mrs. Adams told the court she feared that her husband might take them outside the state.

Zunis Tribesmen Have Banned Beer

Gallup, N. M., April 12 (AP)—Old tribesmen of the Zunis fear beer might arouse the wrath of the Zuni gods.

Today they asked G. A. Trotter, superintendent, to keep the new 3.2 beer off the reservation.

DEATHS OF 8 IN FIRE PROBED

Harris, Minn., April 12 (AP)—A farm house fire near here early Tuesday which brough death to a mother and her seven children today occupied the attention of county authorities who sought to determine whether the father also had perished in the flames.

Searchers late yesterday recovered the bodies of Mrs. Albin Johnson and the children, Harold, 16; Clifford, 9; Kenneth, 7; Dorothy, 5; Bernice, 4; Lester, 2 and James, 14 months.

Deputy Coroner A. O. Stark said he believed there were no other bodies in the ruins.

County Atty. S. B. Wennerberg planned to work on the theory that Johnson might not have suffered the same fate as the other members of his family. Authorities also hoped to learn the orlin of the blaze.

Repeal Plan Approved

Hartford, Ct., April 12 (AP)—A bill providing for a state convention to act on the proposed amendment repealing the Eighteenth Amendment was signed by Gov. Wilbur L. Cross.

BARRICADE AND SIGN GO HAND IN HAND

The Nazi boycott against the Jewish of Germany is shown in the picture above, riding in full force with barricade aiding signs in keeping the stores of Jewish merchants closed. The Nazi trooper is shown with a sign which reads, "Germans, defend yourselves. Don't buy in Jewish shops," standing outside a Jewish owned store. The merchant evidently believing in protecting his own property had erected a wire barricade over the window before closing shop. (International News Photos.)

Public May Borrow From Art Exhibit

Providence, R. I., April 12 (AP)—A collection of original etchings and paintings from which the public may borrow at a nominal fee for periods ranging from one month to one year, will be formed soon by Brown University and the Rhode Island School of Design. All of the pictures will be by living Rhode Island artists.

Bride Is Held on Father's Charge

The case of Mrs. Madeline Lochiatto, bride of a month, who was brought into Newton court by her father on a charge of breaking dishes and furniture in his home, has been continued until Thursday. The father, Sylvester P. Finnell of Gardner st., Newton, told police his wife's refusal to give their daughter money caused the row.

Court Approves $27,500 Verdict

Murdock McNeil, 72, Quincy carpenter, will hold the verdict of $27,500 awarded to him by a jury for injuries sustained when he was run over by a train of the New Haven road, according to an opinion handed down by the full bench of the Supreme Court.

The opinion, written by Judge Henry T. Lummus, decided there was no error in the trial of the case.

MILK INDUSTRY SEES HOPE

Weeks of negotiations by leaders in the New England milk industry have resulted in the announcement of a probable stabilized industry within a short time.

Reginald W. Bird, who has been conducting negotiations between producers and dealers, declared that at the present time 92 per cent of the industry was favorable to a stabilized marketing plan.

The plan, by which the industry seeks to regulate itself and secure results, which are being sought in other sections through government control, is described by Bird as "Democratic control with teeth in it."

He declared the plan will probably soon be put into operation and place the industry on a stable foundation without recourse to borrowing money from the Federal Farm Board. The plan will mean an advance in prices to the farmer and a reasonable advance to the consumer, he said.

He also announced that differences between the New England Dairies, the producers' largest cooperative, the First National Stores and allied producers in the Bellows Falls Cooperative Creamery, had been settled. Both groups are now in accord with the stabilized marketing program, he said.

Bird said the remaining 8 per cent of the industry who were not definitely aligned with the plan were represented chiefly by the United Farmers' Cooperative Creamery. They were cooperating, he said, to straighten out a problem peculiar to their organization. They would no doubt fall in line when this was settled, he said.

Paul Revere Markers Plan

To commemorate the 150th anniversary of the official ending of the Revolutionary War, April 19, 1783, a series of 12 specially designed historical cachets will be issued here and in nearby towns on Patriots' Day.

History records that by an unique circumstance, purposely arranged by Gen. Washington, the proclamation announcing the close of the war for independence was published to the army on the same date as that of the battles of Lexington and Concord in 1775.

Patriots' Day is a legal holiday in Massachusetts. On that date the famous "midnight" rides of Paul Revere and William Dawes, Jr., from Boston to Lexington are re-enacted.

This year the official committees in towns along the route and the Boston Cachet-cover committee are sponsoring the issuance of the cachets. They will be mailed to philatelic collectors, members of patriotic societies and interested individuals in an endeavor to send a "Spirit of '75" message throughout the nation.

DEATH CALLED SUICIDE

Portland, Me., April 12—Death of Charles E. Hall, 52, Peaks Island engineer, was declared a suicide today but revealed a queer twist in marital affairs that showed him twice married to the same woman.

Hall, who died in his home Monday from a bullet through the head, was remarried last October at the instance of the wife with whom he had lived for 21 years. Mrs. Hall had charged that the first marriage was illegal.

Mrs. Hall, her daughter, Mrs. Hattie Anderson, 19, and the latter's husband, Donald Anderson, 23, were questioned at length on the death of Hall but later were released.

Curiously enough, money that was left Mrs. Hall by a benefactor led to the second marriage of the Hall couple at Portsmouth, N. H., last October. Hall had chided his wife about the money left her by Capt. Eben Haskell, veteran sea captain, form whom Mrs. Hall cared for in his last illness.

During the argument, Mrs. Hall maintained to Hall that their marriage 21 years ago was performed by an unauthorized person.

Wilkins Off to Plan Polar Hop

New York, April 12 (AP)—Sir Hubert Wilkins and Bernt Balchen will sail for Bergin, Norway, tomorrow to begin preparations for the Lincoln Ellsworth transantarctic expedition.

Ellsworth and others in the party will meet Sir Hubert and Balchen at Bergen in June. The expedition will sail for Dunedin, New Zealand, thence to the south polar region.

ROBART FLAYS BEER PROFITS

a chance to get a glass of beer to fit the price of his pocketbook."

CENT AN OUNCE COST

Regarding the efforts to secure a large profit, Robart declared that his figures showed one brewer getting a price of $2.25 a case and another $2 a case for the beer. Wholesalers were said to be getting $2.50 case, with a bottle charge, so that the price to retailers worked out, to about 10½ cents a bottle.

Beer in barrels, he said, was being sold by brewers to hotels and restaurants at $18 and on this basis he figures the price per glass should be from 6 to 8 cents.

Under these conditions, he figured a cent an ounce by the glass and 15 cents by the bottle was a fair price to the consumer. He asserted such a price would give a reasonable profit to all concerned.

MANY ASK LICENSES

Members of the State Control Commission sat until 7 p. m. last night to accommodate the swarms of applicants seeking wholesalers' licenses. Chairman Hayes said members of the commission would sit late tonight and tomorrow evening to accommodate the rush of applicants. Sessions would then be adjourned until Monday, he said.

A total of $18,000 for wholesale and trucking licenses was secured yesterday bringing the amount secured to date for the state up to $65,000.

Newsmen Puzzled by Moses' Case

Washington, April 12 (AP)—Former Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, central figure in many a torrid senatorial controversy, has presented a fresh problem to the Senate.

It concerns his status as both a former senator and newspaper correspondent. As a former senator, Moses is entitled to admission to the Senate floor, a privilege denied to members of the press.

The standing committee of press correspondents and Senate officials must decide whether Moses can be admitted to the press gallery and at the same time retain the floor privilege which would give him an advantage over other correspondents.

Insurance Rules Relaxed by Brown

A new set of rules and regulations, issued by Insurance Commissioner Merton L. Brown, supersede and relax to some extent the restrictions imposed on activities of life insurance companies by him March 9, during the national bank holiday.

Under the new wrules a policy holder is required to pay his premiums within 31 days of grace as originally set forth in the policy. However, policy holders, whose first period of grace expired April 10, still have the additional 30 days in which to make their payments.

Gossip About People You Know

HAYES CHECKS ON DRINKERS

Chairman William P. Hayes, of the State alcoholic control commission, visited a large restaurant where beer is dispensed on the premises, on Stuart st. He said he saw but two persons there who looked as if they were a bit under the weather and in both cases they were refused further refreshment.

DRY LEADERS ACTIVE

Probably the greatest handicap which the new commission has met so far in its work is the persistent attempts of members of the Legislature to get licenses granted to people in their particular districts ahead of others waiting in line. Singularly enough, many of these solons have voted dry for years.

HARD LIQUORS NEXT

Now that the Legislature has got rid of the beer bill, it is understood that Governor Ely will press for additional legislation at this session to take care of hard liquor when and if the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed.

MRS. PIGEON FOR MAYOR

Gossip has it that Mrs. Jennie Lottman Barron, former member of the School Committee, will be campaign manager for Mrs. Elizabeth W. Pigeon, present member of that body, in the event she decides to seek election as mayor.

SULLIVAN MAY RUN

Atty. Gilbert P. Sullivan of Codman Hill ave., Dorchester, is the latest to be mentioned as a possible candidate for City Council in Ward 17.

SHAUGHNESSY IN RACE

Former Rep. Herbert P. P. Shaughnessy of 5 Glenwood st., Roxbury, will announce his candidacy for City Council in Ward 12 within a few days. He will have the support of the Shaughnessy Associates, largest Democratic organization in the district.

McNULTY VS. DOWD

Supporters say Rep. Anthony McNulty of Ward 8, South End-Roxbury, will make another attempt this fall to defeat City Councillor John F. Dowd.

CHEEVER MAY RUN

John J. "Joe" Cheever of Dorchester says he will seek election to the School Committee next fall if there are not too many candidates.

Teletype Keeps Chief Straight

As long as teletype exists, it seems, Edward J. Tighe, Revere police chief, will not become lost.

Chief Tighe was to attend a social function at Everett Lodge of Elks but he just didn't know how to reach the hall. Accordingly, a telatype message tapped out which read:

"Revere to Everett. Where is the Everett Lodge of Elks had located?"

"On Church st., just off Everett sq.," tapped back Capt. Pietro Fiorentino of Everett.

"Thanks," came the acknowledgement, "Chief Edward J. Tighe is going to attend an affair there and we did not want him to get lost on the way."

SHIPPING HEAD GOES TO GRAVE

Flags on all harbor craft drooped at half mast today as fellow officials bore to the grave the body of Capt. Eugene E. O'Donnell, president of the Eastern Steamship Lines.

Burial followed a solemn high mass of requiem at St. Cecelia's Church, Back Bay, and a cortege from the late home of Capt. O'Donnell in Beacon st., Back Bay.

Honorary pallbearers included Jere A. Downs, Robert G. Stone, G. Peabody Gardner, Jr., Frederick C. Durmaine, Jr., Charles Hayden, Robert Amory, J. Willard Hayden, Calvin Austin, George Hawley, Col. J. A. Coates, William J. Irving and Harry G. Austin, all of whom are directors of the company.

Active pallbearers were A. B. Sharph, H. E. Melzar, H. W. Blaisdale, Harry I. Brooks, Frank Waterman, Capt. R. W. Allen, Roy Fox, and Capt. Frank K. Crosby, all officials.

HOLMES FAVORS EMBARGO

Washington, April 12 (AP)—Proposals for tariff reductions were assailed by Rep. Holmes (R., Mass.) with the assertion this country, instead of lowering its tariffs, should declare an embargo on all competing foreign made products.

Commenting on a suggestion by Secretary Roper that the United States should take the lead in bringing about tariff reductions, Holmes disputed the theory that American tariffs had contributed to decreases in American export trade.

Holmes said any tariff reduction, in the first place, would transfer to the taxpayers additional burden in proportion to the loss of tariff revenue and would demoralize further the nation's industries.

CURLEY ILL, PAY CUT DELAYED

Illness of Mayor Curley at his Jamaicaway home will prevent the reductions of 5 to 15 per cent in the salaries of city and county employes, authorized by the law signed yesterday by Governor Ely, until April 28, one week from tomorrow.

As Thursday is the final day of the city pay week, it will be impossible to make deductions this week after an executive order is issued by Mayor Curley. This order must be issued designating the date for the inauguration of reductions before any are made.

Before this order is issued the mayor is expected to study the provisions of the new law. At the present time he is unable to be reached at his home because of the severe cold from which he is suffering.

In addition to the mayor's illness, the failure of banks here to offer bids on the request of City Treasurer Dolan for a loan of $1,000,000 in anticipation of taxes is expected to delay action on his slashes.

The slashes will affect all 18,537 city and county employes with the exception of scrubwomen, who are officially listed on the payrools as "cleaners." It is understood the cuts will be 5 per cent in salaries below $1000; 10 per cent between $1000 and $1600 and 15 per cent in salaries above that figure.

REFERENDUM ON BEER ASKED

Waterville, Me., April 12 (AP)—The committee on temperance of the Maine Congregational Christian Conference recorded itself in favor of a referendum on the Weatherbee bill permitting the sale of beer and the transportation of all liquors for personal use in Maine.

The action of the congregational leaders followed by one day a meeting of Christian Civic League executives who declined to vote on the referendum question, adopting instead a plan to form a central strategy board to meet April 25 to decide what course to pursue.

Publicity For G. B. S. in Semi-Final Stage

By GILBERT SELDES

If George Bernard Shaw had come to America in 1914 he would have been received with every emotion from respect to adoration, but it would all have come from a comparatively small number of people. Ten years later he moved from the position of a world-dramatist to that of a world-figure, still retaining the admiration of the people he insulted and losing ground only with his earlier admirers. This year he is still a playwright, but it is long since he has written one of his good plays; he who was once the most skilful of the Socialists admires dictators; and he speaks not under the auspices of the Theater Guild but of the Academy of Political Science. He continues to say insolent things and his effortless publicity still lands him on the first page; but he has made the fatal mistake of being 76 years old while his followers of a generation ago are still in their forties and fifties. They cannot forgive him for having grown old before they did and for changing his ideas without changing his methods. They want him to be the Shaw who was their private property, with whom they could rap their enemies over the skull, the last word in witty wisdom on their side. As usual, Shaw sidesteps the demands of his public and creates a new public which takes what he has to give.

Gilbert Seldes

Made Famous?

If he chooses to look back he may smile at the elements in his career which made him famous. Almost forgotten in this country is his work as a dramatic critic in the 1890's; he was one of several brilliant men writing in a brilliant weekly, The Saturday Review, edited by the erratic Frank Harris. Like all dramatic critics, everywhere, he was a figure in the public prints; people quarreled about him and he gave them plenty to talk about. Knowing music (and loving Mozart), he wrote a book to prove that Wagner's cycle of the Niebelungen, was a Socialist tract; he wrote another to make Ibsen shocking to the British public. And having announced that the contemporary drama really had something to say, and finding no proof among his contemporaries, he himself says, by writing his he manufactured the evidence, as first plays.

Of the three "unpleasant plays" two are forgotten, and the third, "Mrs. Warren's Profession," is no longer produced. Of the pleasant plays only "Arms and the Man" is thoroughly good reading—so good, in fact, that the Theatre Guild produced it a few years ago in such a way as to conceal all the sharpness and bite of Shaw's ideas. (It is not only militarism but the romantic ideal that Shaw is trying to deflate in that play.) Even "Man and Superman" (with the terrifying prewar idea that women pursue men, hounding them in those quaint times into marriage) is only a pleasant memory.

A Moralist

The reason Shaw is so important is that he is a profoundly moral man—a professional moralist. All the paradoxes which shocked the moral people 30 years ago come from the same source: his feeling that a true moral life was being denied to people by conventional and hypocritical morals. When, a long time ago, Shaw declared for equality of income (equality without any reservations, every man to receive as much money as every one else, a universal, generous dole or wage) he based it on the highly moral idea that as we are all possessed of immortal souls we are equal before God and should be equal in the sight of man no less. Whatever he objects to in rent, wages, the marriage convention, war and all the other pretty instruments of our time is a hurt to beter living. The man of Shaw's future (as in "Back to Methuselah") will have the most moral life, of all, for he will run through all the desires and ambitions of petty morals virtually before he is hatched and will live several thousand years in pure thought. High morals can hardly go further than that.

Greatness

With that morality goes the quality which I prize most highly in Shaw: his feeling for greatness. That is his finest paradox, that he has made people think of him as an idol-smasher, when, fundamentally, he is a hero-worshipper. His Caesar is actually a greater figure than Shakespeare's puffy stuffed-toga, and his Caesar teaches even Cleopatra (who is not so attractive as Shakespeare's) what greatness means. When Cleopatra says that she wishes to rule, not to be happy, but to do what she must do, regardless of happiness, Shaw's sense of human destiny is profoundly moving. The same sense of greatness comes in lightning flashes through other plays: "Major Barbara" and

SPOUSE JAILED; ASKS DIVORCE

Petition for separate support was under advisement today in Middlesex court for Mrs. Aurora De Rosier, wife of Henry De Rosier, 42, now in jail for attack on a 17-year-old Arlington girl last summer.

The pretty brunette wife told Judge Arthur E. Beans that she separated from her husband in July, the day he was alleged to have enticed Miss Margaret Raiche into his Arlington home on the pretext of housework employment.

At the time of the attack, De Rosier was captured in the home of a neighbor and was sentenced in September for a term of eight months in the House of Correction.

FIRE DESTROYS GIRLS' SCHOOL

Simsbury, Ct., April 12 (AP)—The Beaverbrook building of the Ethel Walker school, a girls' preparatory and finishing institution, was destroyed by fire with a loss estimated at $150,000.

The building, housing the administration offices, the main dining room and a dormitory where 80 of the 170 girls of the fashionable boarding school lived, burned from 3 p. m. until late tonight. Not until the walls of the three-story brownstone and brick structure collapsed did the flames die down.

Firemen from four towns saved an addition, built in 1925, which included the gymnasium and several study rooms.

"The Doctor's Dilemma." It is Shaw's answer to his own question: What is man for?

This is the pre-talkie Shaw. The decline of Shaw in the minds of intellectuals coincides pretty closely with the appearance of Shaw in one of the early talkies. He is, in them, an amusing Christmassy, talkative old man; a comedian. It is as if his early reputation had caught up with him at the end. For in the days when they called Shaw a clown he was in deadly earnest; and now, when every word is taken to the world, he makes faces at a camera. Perhaps, not trusting posterity, he is trying to destroy his own reputation.

LARGER GUARD FOR CROSS

Hartford, Conn., April 12 (AP)—State police disclosed that the guard at the executive offices of Gov. Wilbur L. Cross and at the Hartford Club, where he maintains his residence here, has been increased because of anonymous threatening letter received by the 71-year-old governor.

Officials did not make the contents of the communication public, but investigators said it was "obviously written by a crank."

100 PICKED FOR FOREST ARMY

Boston's first contingent of President Roosevelt's "forest army" will leave from the Army Base tomorrow noon for Fort Devens, Ayer.

According to plans today nearly 100 will be in the first group that will study reforestration for two weeks before assignment to national forest areas in the program of unemployment relief.

Army officials are working in conjunction with the Boston welfare department in the selection of the men who are to benefit by the plans of President Roosevelt.

TALLULAH'S DAD ILL IN CAPITAL

Washington, April 12 (AP)—One of the outstanding Democratic House leaders—Rep. William B. Bankhead of Alabama—suffered what was reported as a heart attack and "acute indigestion" as he completed a vigorous speech yesterday for the administration's farm mortgage refinancing bill.

After receiving treatment and gaining a few hours' rest at the Capitol first aid room, Bankhead showed marked improvement. He then was taken to his residence here.

Dr. George W. Calver, attending Capitol physician, and a commander in the navy, who treated the Representative, said: "I do not consider his condition as alarming. After a few days of rest Mr. Bankhead will be ready to resume duty."

Senator Bankhead (D., Ala.), a brother, and Mrs. Bankhead were notified and hastened to his bedside. Miss Tallulah Bankhead, stage and screen actress in New York, a daughter, also learned of her father's illness and immediately called Dr. Calver for a report on his condition.

"SHARLIE"

By Beatrice Burton

Sharlie Meets Her Boss, and Is Surprised to Find Him So Young and Handsome

MISS BOYD, Miss Mitchell and Miss Cobb were the other stenographers. Miss Boyd and Miss Mitchell looked enough alike to be sisters. They were dark-eyed and dark-skinned, and they dressed very smartly in plain black cloth dresses. Miss Cobb was little and silvery-blond. She wore an engagement ring and let the office know that she was going to leave to be married in the spring.

"Just as soon as Mr. Collins comes back from Florida," she told Sharlie one noon when the two found themselves alone in the office, "He hired me, himself, seven years ago. And when I leave I want to hand my resignation in to him personally . . . I wouldn't feel as if I'd been loyal to him if I left now without telling him about it."

Sharlie thought that that was very silly, but she did not say so. She had noticed already that all of the women in the office seemed to have a deep interest in Mr. Collins. Miss Sargent looked up the Miami weather report in the newspaper every morning so that the whole office could know how much sunshine Mr. Collins was enjoying in the South.

"Wouldn't you like to see his secretary down in Miami, Miss Ballinger?" she asked Enda one morning when they had all been looking over the weather report together, "Don't you wonder what sort of girl she is."

The Collins Company had opened a branch office in Miami and Sharlie knew that every day Mr. Collins' secretary there telephoned Edna to ask her certain things or to give her certain instructions.

"Why, I imagine she's a very capable quiet sort of girl," Edna answered coolly. "She has a nice voice, and she seems to be quick and business-like . . . Why are you so curious about her?"

Miss Sargent laughed sarcastically. "Oh, I'm not curious," she said, "But I thought you'd be." She winked at Miss Mitchell as she spoke, and Miss Mitchell laughed too.

It came as a shock to Sharlie to find out that these people in the office knew that Edna was in love with Mr. Collins, just as she herself knew it.

Back From Florida

On the 15th of April Mr. Collins came back from Florida.

By that time Sharlie had made up her mind that the office of the Collins Company was the dullest place on earth. She had looked over the three young men who worked there as salesmen, and had decided that not one of them could ever interest her.

Mr. Goode, the sales manager, was married and middle-aged. Mr. Pettit was unmarried, but was engaged to a girl who met him for lunch every day. Mr. Haynes had asked Sharlie to have dinner with him one night, but she had declined his invitation.

For one thing, Edna had made her promise not to have engagements with any of the men in the office. She said it was best not to be too friendly with the people you worked with.

For another thing, Sharlie herself had no desire to go anywhere with Mr. Haynes. He was pleasant and friendly, but he was fat, and he was shorter than she was.

"The man in that office of ours are simply impossible," she had said to Edna, disgustedly, at the time of Mr. Haynes' dinner invitation. "All of them. Compared to them, even Jim Barnum is as handsome as a Greek god—and heavan knows Jim is no beauty. I'll bet there isn't another office in town with as little excitement in it as ours has!"

And then, just a few days later, Mr. Collins telephoned Edna from Miami and told her that he would be back in the main office on the 25th.

Windy April Days

The days of Mr. Collins' return from Florida was one of those sunny, windy April days that seem to bring the freshness of the country into the city streets. Almost everyone was wearing light spring clothes, and the florists' windows were gay with yellow daffodils and deep purple violets that looked as if they had just been picked in some mossy forest.

"I think I'll buy a few flowers for Mr. Collins' desk, Sharlie," Edna said that morning as the two girls paused before a flower shop on their way to the office. "Just by way of welcoming him back. Don't you think it would be a nice thing to do?"

"I wouldn't do it, Edna. You know how all the people in the office will talk about you if you do buy them. They all think you're crazy about him, as it is."

A flush darkened the whiteness of Edna's skin and she turned away from the shop window. Then suddenly she stopped in the middle of the sidewalk.

"No! I'm going to buy them!" she said, as if she had been having an argument with herself. "What do I care what the people at the office say? I've always wanted to do nice little things for him, and I never did because he had a wife. Now, if I want to, I don't see why I shouldn't."

BOSTON TESTED AMERICAN

CHOPS VICTOR

6 chops (lamb or pork).
1 teaspoon horseradish.
1 tablespoon butter.
1 cup thick white sauce.
¼ cup American cheese grated.
¼ cup bread crumbs.
½ teaspoon salt.

Use large chops. Melt butter, add horseradish and white sauce. Saute chops which have been seasoned with salt and pepper. Spread the top of each chop with the sauce. Grate cheese over the top with a sprinkling of bread crumbs. Put in a buttered pan and cook in hot oven (450 degrees F.) about 45 minutes, until tender and brown.

Clip Here and Save

1 small can tomatoes
3 carrots
½ box broad noodles
2 white turnips
1 tsp. chopped parsley
¼ tsp. paprika
2 cloves
hot water
4 small white onions
4 potatoes
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce

Melt butter in a heavy skillet and add the chopped onion. Saute to a bright brown. Flour the lamb slices well and brown in the fat. When well seared on both sides, place in a casserole and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pour 1 cup boiling water in skillet, add the tomatoes and cook several minutes, and pour over the meat. Peel the carrots and cut in halves or quarters lengthwise, dice the turnips or cut in balls and place the vegetables with the chopped parsley about the lamb, add the remainder of the seasonings, with enough boiling water to fill half the casserole, cover and place in a very moderate oven, 250 to 275 degrees. Cook very slowly two hours, then add the whole white onions and the potatoes pared and cut in quarters. More water may be added if necessary. Replace the cover and continue cooking for another hour or until the potatoes and onions are tender. Cook the noodles in boiling salted water, rinse in cold water and arrange over the meat and vegetables. Simmer a few moments longer. Thicken the gravy with a tablespoon of flour mixed to a paste with ¼ cup cold water. Add the Worcestershire sauce and more salt and pepper if required. Serve in the casserole with a garnish of parsley and ripe olives or cucumber rings. The success of this dish depends on slow oven cooking. It makes a fine-flavored, rich, appetizing lamb stew.

ITALIAN SALAD

1 can large sardines
2 hard boiled eggs
1 tbsp. vinegar
2 tbsps. salad oil
1 clove garlic, or 1 onion or its juice

Chop eggs and garlic (or onion) thoroughly in mixing bowl. Mash the sardines and add. Then add vinegar and oil, mixing well. Chill and serve over quarters of head lettuce, endive or romaine lettuce. This recipe is for four servings.

SELECTED SALADS FOR SPRING

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

IN THE SPRING, with our fancy turning towards a more slender silhouette, we become more than ever salad-conscious. The main question is, however, What's new in the salad world?

Shrimp Salad in Cucumber Boats

Wash and pare short cucumbers. Cut them in halves lengthwise. Remove seeds and steam until tender. Chill and arrange on beds of crisp lettuce. Have the shrimps, which have been broken into pieces, chilled and marinated with French dressing. Drain and mix with mayonnaise. Fill cucumber boats with the shrimps and garnish with whole shrimps.

Jellied Pineapple and Crabmeat Salad

2 tsps. granulated gelatine
1-3 cup cold chicken stock or 1 chicken bouillon cube dissolved in 1-3 cup boiling water and cooled
1 tbsp. vinegar
1 cup mayonnaise
1 cup drained diced canned pineapple
½ cup diced celery
1 cup crabmeat
2 cups shredded cabbage
½ cup French dressing.

Soak gelatine in the cool chicken stock for five minutes. Dissolve over hot water, add the vinegar and cool. When cold, add slowly to one-half cup of mayonnaise, beating thoroughly. Meanwhile, combine the pineapple, crabmeat and the diced celery and added to the gelatine mixture. Pack in cold wet molds and chill. When firm, remove from molds and arrange on the shredded cabbage that has been marinated in the French dressing for five minutes just before serving. Garnish with radish roses and serve with remaining mayonnaise. Serves six.

Jellied Salmon Salad

One can best salmon
½ tbsp. flour
2 tbsps. granulated gelatine
1 tbsp. dry mustard
6 tbsps. cold water
½ tsp. salt
1½ tbsps. sugar
1½ tbsps. melted butter
Few grains cayenne pepper
3 egg yolks
¾ cup milk
¼ cup vinegar

Remove salmon from can, rinse with hot water, drain, separate into flakes. Cover gelatine in cold water 15 minutes or more. Mix rest of ingredients and cook in double boiler, stirring constantly until thick. Take off fire, add gelatine, stir until dissolved; strain through cheesecloth; add flaked salmon, chopped celery and nuts. Fill molds. Chill until it hardens.

SQUIRE'S Arlington HAM

PIPING HOT, she serves an Arlington Ham for Easter Dinner. So did her mother, year after year, —and her grandmother even before that.

Perhaps the ham will be festive with its Easter garnishings, — brown sugar coated, with cloves, pineapple slices, or the like.

Or possibly her family prefers Arlington Ham boiled to just the right point of juicy tenderness, and served with mustard or a tasty relish.

Baked or boiled, hot or cold, it is always delicious.

For 90 years Arlington Hams and Easter dinners have been inseparably connected. Generations of New England folks have praised the mildness, the tenderness, and the delicate flavor of this pink and white meat.

BANKER FEARED A SUICIDE

Pittsfield, April 12—The Housatonic river and Pittsfield lakes are being dragged and the Pittsfield Cemetery searched for traces of William L. Adam, 78, president of the Berkshire County Savings Bank, who has been missing from home since Sunday.

Friends persist, however, in the belief that the well known banker has left the city for a few days of rest. They have communicated with friends of Adam in other cities but as yet have received no word regarding him.

Police decided last night to search the cemetery, where Adam's wife is buried. Mrs. Adam died a year ago and the banker has felt her death keenly, according to friends.

Farley Warns His Party of Imposters

Washington, April 12 (AP) — James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, issued a statement in which he said: "I wish to impress upon all well wishers of our party and the administration that they should contribute nothing except to people properly accredited by the Democratic national committee."

In connection, Farley said the committee and party were not connected with a "so-called victory fund bill to be held at the Washington Auditorium the evening of April 17.

THERE IS BEAUTY THIS SEASON in the tall, the short, the young, the frankly middle-aged and even the elderly woman as long as she selects the models which are becoming to her type . . . never have fashions been so flexible.

It is the spirit in which we wear our finery that reflects the mode . . . the Fair Things may be laden with a fortune in jewels and wear expensive frocks with such finesse that one is not aware of these dazzling habiliments . . . there are those who can wear a gingham gown and still radiate the latest fashion note.

Mrs. Francis A. Harding

Such a one was Mrs. Francis Appleton Harding at a recent charity ball at which she wore an evening gown made of Anderson plaid gingham with straps and girdle of red velvet and very chic it was on her . . . incidentally, this was NOT a poverty party. The gown was cut on the very latest lines and looked remarkably girlish.

As usual the Ritz dinning salon was crowded with society's fairest yesterday at the weekly fashion parade by Hickson, Inc. Many new spring costumes were observed, as the day was fine.

In one jolly group we glimpsed petite Mrs. J. H. Brooks, Jr., looking like a sub-deb in a sport suit of tweed with ivory silk blouse. Her companions were Miss Louise Kidder, a very lovely Fair Thing in the modish dark navy blue with revers and cuffs of PINK pique and very smart it was . . .

Mrs. George Shields also looked charming in the dark blue with touches of white and Miss Barbara Whitney was a contrasting note in black with rose printed gown underneath her coat . . .

Mrs. Ernest B. Dane., Jr., appeared at her customary table in a dark navy outfit which was boasting a red fox scarf this day . . .

A Merry Group of Favorites

IN ANOTHER CORNER we saw a merry group which included the aforementioned Mrs. Francis A. Harding in black; her sister, Mrs. Sam Batchelder, in a sporty green tweed; pretty Kitty Brown, who always dashes into these affairs between office hours (you know, Kay has entered the business world and is a success at it), Mrs. Edward Francis (Margaret Ford), whose costume was noticeable even at a fashion show, a red and white tweed with dark blue jumper, very smart!

We saw Grace Madden drop over for a chat before leaving . . . she was in her winter furs yet.

Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman was at a table with Miss Sylvia Warren and Mrs. Henry Murray (Charlotte Rantoul) . . .

Mrs. Janice Vaughan Smith looked as lovely as usual in a black satin dress and black hat . . . she looks quite Parisian.

Miss Carol Smith set off her Titian hair with a High Hat . . . you know these draped turbans are immensely becoming to some types.

• • •

Ellen Pierce Wears Smart Blue Suit

WE SAW MRS. ADOLPH LEEDS still wearing her mink coat . . . it was a coolish day and there were many fur coats noted in the large throng . . . Margaret Lang, who has just returned from Europe, and Mrs. Earl Major were in this group.

Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church and Evelyn Royce were seen in the lobby chatting . . . Miss Royce's costume was very springish of blue checked wool . . .

Also glimpsed was Mrs. Fuller Halsey, Mrs. Charles P. Sylvester, Mrs. Herbert Bramwell Shaw and hundreds of others we knew.

• • •

Miss Eleanor Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. B. K. Brooks of Falmouth, is sailing for Italy on the Saturnia on Saturday from Boston. Miss Brooks is the sister of Mrs. Harold D. Walker (Barbara Brooks) of Chestnut st., Boston. She will spend the spring in Italy, gradually journeying north and will return about the middle of June.

Fiancee Feted at Many Parties

MISS ROSALIND HUIDECKOER of New York, fiancee of Joseph Cunningham of Milton, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Cunningham, parents of Mr. Cunningham, in Milton. There have been many parties given in her honor during the past fortnight.

Mrs. Gordon Dewart

• • •

The Easter Flower and Plant sale which was to have started today at 537 Boylston st. for the Dennison House and continued through until Easter has been cancelled.

• • •

We hear that Miss Felice Leeds is enjoying herself very much indeed in Paris . . . she is brushing up on her French and studying dramatics. Mrs. Adolph Leeds, her mother, is planning to join her daughter in France in June.

• • •

Glimpsed Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Dewart (Emma Dickerman) at the Club Barclay recently and very chic was she in white satin evening frock, which set off her dark eyes and black hair, worn in the ever-so-smart bangs.

NORTH SHORE GROUP ATTENDS

MRS. JAMES CUNNINGHAM GRAY, JR. — MRS. ROBERT OGDEN

"Congratulations," said Mrs. Robert Ogden to Mrs. James Cunningham Gray, Jr., as they discussed the recent charity party which proved such a successful social event under the chairmanship of Mrs. Gray. The former Janet Rothwell's gown of black crepe with bolero of white net caused much comment and admiration. Mrs. Ogden, who was Edith Milton before her marriage last fall, also received admiring glances in a gown of sky blue crepe. The Ogdens have taken an apartment in Charles st. (Boston American photo.)

Providence, R. I., April 12 (AP) —Under unanimous consent to suspend the rules, a resolution ratifying the child labor amendment to the United States Constitution was introduced today in the Rhode Island House.

BOOKS—And a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

The other evening, at a meeting where several versifiers were to read from their works, a young man, one of those scheduled to perform, arrived breathless and late. He had a great deal of assurance, and he wore a rather insipid and foolish smile as he was introduced and began to speak. His opening remark was:

"Of course, you don't expect a poet to be on time."

And he started questioningly into the audience.

I am afraid that I took an instant and instinctive dislike to him. Why should a poet be a privileged person, given to not keeping engagements? And how ridiculously egotistical it seemed to hear anyone calling himself a poet.

I don't know why this should be so. A painter may call himself an artist without fear of being laughed at. An actor may certainly name himself as of that profession, and a sculptor may, without appearing vain-glorious, allude to the fact that he works in marble. But somehow a poet should not label himself. He should leave that to others.

• • •

Summoned for jury duty, Booth Tarkington could call himself a novelist, when asked his occupation, and be taken seriously. But I feel sure that if Maeterlinck were called, he would modestly state that he was a writer, instead of using the word "poet."

Is one shy of the appellation because the calling is so noble, or is one swayed by the baser fact that the profession is notoriously underpaid? Poets have always been associated with garrets and penury, though nowadays that should hardly persist. One's fellow juryman, being mostly butchers, plumbers, clerks and bankers, would surely smile if one among them announced himself as a poet. He would be stared out of countenance, too, and perhaps accused by the lawyers on both sides as unfit and incapable of rendering a sane and just verdict. Such are the rewards of the highest form of artistic expression.

If one says he is a composer, we do not laugh. What is there, then, in the word "poet" that causes us amusement? We think instantly of a dreamer, I suppose. We think of one unused to coping with the solemn affairs of this world. And yet poets, from time immemorial, have proved themselves the builders of a tragic philosophy more profound than that of other men.

We are the music makers.
And we are the dreamers of dreams,
Wandering by lone sea breakers,
And sitting by desolate streams."

Who would not wish to name himself as of that august band to which Arthur O'Shaughnessy surely belonged?

Yet, somehow, if one is a true poet, one cannot do it. The world finds it out sooner or later—generally later, alas!—and gives the poet his crown, but he himself wears it in secret, and does not speak of the honor. For poets, being thinkers, and peering into eternity, know the futility of all titles and fame. The nobler their singing, the less they say of it. They simply give us their songs—and let it go at that.

SAW Miss Margaret Foote home from Dana Hall for the holidays wearing a smart brown tweed suit with a Whatteau straw hat. She was accompanied by Miss Louisa Beane of Cambridge, also a student of Dana Hall, wearing a checked suit of brown, stylish for spring wear, and a smart polo coat, topped off by a straw hat.

Miss Cecily Livermore is wearing a black and white checked suit with emerald green accessories, smart hat, scarf and bag. Her sister, Miss Sally Livermore, who has just returned from Paris, looks chic in a brown heather tweed sport suit, matching hat with a smart red feather and a bright neck scarf.

Mrs. Gardiner Bullard gave a tea for a group of her friends on Monday at her home on Berkeley st. She received her guests in dark blue and white spring print.

Mrs. Richard Shaw of Brookline appeared in an ecru knit sport suit, smart brown hat showing her golden brown curls and topped off with a bright red feather of red and orange.

Mrs. Irving Badger, sister-in-law of Mrs. Bullard, appeared in a smart spring ensemble of navy blue with light blue and white check trimmings.

Mrs. Frederick Pratt of Chestnut Hill wore navy blue with green vest and dainty white bow or georgette. A smart black straw hat with an echoing tiny bow of georgette.

Mrs. Irving Paris wore black with a sable scarf and a shiny straw hat.

Mrs. Robert Daly looking well in a dainty lace blouse, a large picture hat most becoming to her. Her coat was of black broadcloth with a tailored ermine collar.

Mrs. Parker Haven wore an attractive brown ensemble.

Mrs. Brayton Morton of Beacon Hill and New Bedford wore a brown afternoon frock with a most attractive scarf collar held by a huge brass button.

Mrs. Richard Clark Floyd wore a sky-blue spring costume that was lovely on her.

Mrs. Green Freeman of Newton appeared in a snappy green and white checked crepe.

Mrs. Lothrop Withington looked very chic in navy blue with blue cuffs and collar, and a white gross grain bow on her hat.

SECRETS OF HEALTH, BEAUTY AND CHARM ARE SENSIBLY TOLD IN NEW BOOK

Cleanliness, Both Interior and Exterior, Is Always the First Requisite

By Margaret Matson

WHEN THE MAIL man dropped into our office the other day, he brought with him a little book entitled "Health, Beauty and Charm." Someone thought we would be interested and we were—very! The book is by Barbara Dale, who for the past dozen years has been working in Hollywood, keeping motion picture stars lithe and lovely—and, we might add, doing it very well. What interested us most about the book—it's not a large book, just a hundred and fifty pages—was her emphasis upon cleanliness. Although the book is called Health, Beauty and Charm, it is really a dissertation upon interior and exterior cleanliness, which she refers to as "the very foundation of our lives." A strong statement, you might say, but when you really analize it, a true one at that.

Beginning with her "Bathroom brevities," in which she recommends that one rise at least twenty minutes earlier than the rest of the family and spend that time in grooming and exercise in order that the day might be started vigorously, she proceeds straight through a sensible, easy-to-read and easy-to-follow routine. She has diets not only for reducing, but for the usually-forgotten thin woman, and one diet which she calls her "internal bath" which is for health alone.

"Beauty comes from within. The proper diet and proper exercise will assure us healthy bodies and a happy outlook on life, and with these beauty assets it will not be difficult for us to make the most of our possibilities," to quote Miss Dale. "No woman has a right to be proud of her beauty before the age of twenty, but for her beauty beyond the age of forty she deserves respect and worship, since such beauty is a triumph of the mind and soul. The woman of forty who wishes to regain her beauty must do one sort of beauty work, and the girl of twenty who wishes to be beautiful at forty must do another kind, but both can achieve the same results."

. . . and another bit which she gives in her first chapter—"Don't make the mistake of saying to yourself, 'Oh, I never could be beautiful, because this or that is wrong with me,' for let me tell you right now that the beauty which brings one popularity, both public and private, often includes a fault that marks its owner as individual. We often hear that a certain actress has succeeded in spite of her imperfections. Perhaps it would be nearer the truth to say that she succeeded because of a fault that set her apart from the crowd." An encouraging thought!

Blue Correct for Baby Boy, Pink For a Girl

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please give me some advice about baby clothing? In what color should a baby boy be dressed, in pink or in blue? W.

This question as to whether it should be pink for girl babies and blue for boy babies, or pink for boys and blue for girls, has never been unanimously determined by authorities. I wish that it would be. But in general pink is assigned to girls, and the more sturdy color, blue, is assigned to boys. And this does seem, as far as colors go, to be appropriate. The question is solved charmingly, I think, by the mode of dressing all babies these days in all white, and this seems to be the new "fashion note" for these newcomers.

Acknowledging Condolences

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please advise me in your column if it is correct and good form to acknowledge sympathy letters received when you have lost a member of the family, or is this unnecessary?

A READER.

For every letter of sympathy, for every floral tribute, we should write a note of thanks. Just a sentence or two, but written (not a printed or engraved card, and sincerely worded.

CHICAGO'S 'BEST DRESSED DEBUTANTE'

Miss Nancy Traylor, lovely daughter of the Melvin Traylors of Chicago, and known as Chicago's "best dressed deb," advocates to wear in the parade of fashion on Easter morn a navy blue wool coat with white stitching on the shoulders and sleeves and a cunning little bow under the chin. With this she wears one of the new fez hats in navy straw, and not one, but three delicate white orchids on her left shoulder. Her gloves are the new cotton pique ones, with ruffles of pique around the cuffs.

Miss Nancy Traylor, left, in a gayly flowered print dress of yellow, orange, brown and white colorings for Easter tea parties. She carries a huge cluster of white freesia in one hand and a fabric hat in the other.

Miss Nancy Traylor, right, in a novelty woolen swagger suit that has the important wide shoulder effect. A bright green cape blouse has the inevitable bow at the neckline. The skirt of this suit is straight.

Costumes Change the Personality of Their Wearer

Miss Nancy Traylor, who has earned for herself the title of Chicago's best-dressed debutante, demonstrates an interesting point in the choosing of her clothes. As she changes her costumes, she changes her personality—at least in effect.

In one outfit, she is the sleek sophisticate, with hair drawn back smartly from her face, a severe little hat, and a simple dark dress with exaggerated accent on the gloves. Again one sees her on the street looking very much like a school girl. Her costume is simple, but with a different sort of simplicity. Her hair is fluffed about her face and she wears a more flattering brimmed hat. Then in the afternoon, she dones a summery floral print, a fabric hat, and becomes at once more quaint, more feminine.

This is the sort of thing that all of us may do if we choose—a trick that makes clothes more interesting and our personalities more varied. It is surprising how the simple process of changing one's coiffure or exchanging a brimmed for a brimless hat can alter the effect of a certain outfit.

One moment it might be quite mannish and trim, the next almost formal, depending upon the accessories that are chosen. Especially is this true this season, when fabrics are cobined in an almost reasonless way—wools, satins, cottons and linens all playing in together. One suit serves many purposes and appears in many guises, and likewise one person is as many persons as she pleases to be.

THE DAILY TRUE STORY

Killing the Old Love

THE TWO MEN shouldered their way through the noon-hour Loop. Suddenly one stopped short.

"Tom, wait for me here a minute, will you? My—my girl is looking in that window there ——"

"Sure, Web," answered Tom Castle easily.

Hat in hand, Webster Wilson approached the girl. Square of shoulder, chin high, eyes bright he stood beside her at the shop window without speaking.

"W-web!" she said, startled, as she saw the reflection of his face beside her own.

Web caught her hand, turned it over and looked at it. Then he let it go. "Married, Caroline?"

She flushed. "Well, I didn't hear from you, Web. Two years it was and—and a girl can't wait forever, you know, but—but—"

"Just as well you did marry, Caroline," Web said in off-hand fashion. "Got any youngsters?"

"One," she replied in low tones. "Just four weeks old today, Web. This is the first time I've been downtown since."

Web laughed. "Me—I got two of 'em. Heaven help 'em!"

"Oh, I've got myself into a nasty mix-up. Got into a gang that swore up and down they could make new paper bills to look like the real thing. Cops swarmed down on us—I think that fellow over there is shadowing me now—" he indicated Tom with a jerky thumb.

The girl drew back from him. "Why—Web! I—I—I don't—understand."

"Oh, there's nothin' to understand about it," he said in ugly tones. "If I'm jugged for it, I won't be out until the kids are pretty well grown. It's a serious thing making money. I'm dollar bills we were turning out—neat job, too, if I do say it myself. But not neat enough. Well—Caroline—I'll be blowing along—if I can sneak off before that fellow clamps bracelets on me. I'm lucky. Glad to have seen you again, Caroline. Better not—not mention to any of the old crowd you've seen me . . . I—I hate to have them know . . .

"I won't say a word, Web!" she assured him, eyes wide, lips trembling.

"You make your getaway first, Caroline. I'll stay here, careless-like, 'til you've turned the corner. See? No use getting you mixed up with me."

"Well, Web!" said Tom strolling up at this minute. "Tell me the low-down on this, Old Man? I heard every word of it. Have you lost your mind or—"

Web shrugged, eyes dull. "I've been thinking of the moment I'd meet Caroline for days, Tom. You know we were never really engaged but she—she thought as much of me as I did of her, Tom. I knew that. But I didn't have a nickel to bless myself with and I felt I wantedto make a little pile before I tied her down. I made it, too. I had enough that I made a killing when the market broke. Bought outright seven thousand dollars worth of stocks that have doubled already beside a neat bank account. I never wrote her because I knew I'd come back if I heard from her. I—I love her more than anything in the world, Tom."

"And the wife and two kids?" asked Tom curiously.

"Just made 'em up out of whole cloth. Nothing like a wife and kids to kill an old love, Tom." Web laughed mirthlessly.

"And the bogus ten-dollar bills?" pressed Tom.

"Caroline is straight as a string. Not a crooked streak in her anywhere. If—if she'd just been married and there were no children to—to complicate things," he sang in a low tone, "I don't know what I might or might not have done. But with a youngster—well, I wanted her to be so disgusted with me she'd forget about me entirely. I—you see, Tom, I love Caroline and I want her to be happy. Well, so long, Old Timer! I'll be blowing out of town, I guess. There's nothing in old Chi for me—now. I—I'll look you up, Tom, when I come through again!"

With a quick handshake and a working of the throat muscles he was gone. And if he had never existed, the busy noon-hour Loop crowd swallowed him instantly.

Mate's Grouchy Woman Tells Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Won't you please help me solve my marriage troubles? I have been married for four years and have two children, both boys. All my married life I have been miserable.

My husband comes home from work, doesn't say a word to me, has his supper, reads the paper and falls asleep. It's been that way for years. He never takes me out anywhere, and then kicks if I want to go to the movies alone. I am everything a wife can be, neat and orderly about my home, and keep the children clean.

Will you please advise me what I should do? MISERABLE.

Dear Miserable: I hope you won't think me one of those boresome optimists who are always pointing out silver linings to clouds. But this grouchy husband of your does come home, and stays there, even if he does nod over the evening paper. Many women whose husbands do not appear even for meals would be glad to change places with you. And, may I ask, do you read the paper? Have you anything besides domestic happenings to talk over with your husband? I get a good many letters from me comlaining that their wives have nothing interesting to say when they're home.

Beauty Radiates From Women in Love

By HELEN FOLLETT

WOMEN WHO are in love are blessed with a radiance that is akin to beauty. Sarah Bernhardt confessed in her old age that she kept youthful because she was always in love. It's a wonderful formula. All the pleasant emotions help keep the face in form. All the mean ones wreck it. Jealousy, anger, petulance, envy are the enemies of good looks. Not alone because they invite unpleasing expressions, but because they have a depressing effect upon the physical mechanism. They chill the skin, interfere with digestion, disturb sleep and so furrow the countenance that in course of time it will look like an old walnut. That statement ought to scare the surly ones and the fretters.

Idea Shoe

THE LACED OXFORD is the ideal shoe for the housewife who travels the domestic beat all day, because, as it spreads from wear, it can be laced more snugly. The foot needs support. Women who wear pumps and house slippers are the ones who limp around on painful little dogs, get calloused heels, ingrowing nails. When shoes are out of shape, offer no support, their days of usefulness are over. Twinging toes make twinging tempers.

RHEUMATISM A MENACE

By Dr. R. S. Copeland

MOST PERSONS have heard a lot about rheumatism. Either they have suffered from the disease or know of others who are chronic sufferers. Although tremendous strides have been made in the treatment of rheumatism, the disease still continues to be a great menace to health. It is a menace because of the serious complications that result from the ailment.

Dr. Copeland

The word "rheumatism" is greatly abused, misunderstood and misapplied. It is commonly used to describe symptoms which are really caused by neuritis, arthritis, neuralgia and other afflictions of muscles and joints.

It is a disease which afflicts children as well as adults. In children it is often confused with so-called "growing pains."

In one form the disease is known as "acute rheumatic fever." The sufferer had a high fever." The sufferer had a high pains of severe pains in the joints. This may be so severe that the slightest vibration or movement produces excruciating suffering.

Victims of this disease should remain in bed until all symptoms and fever disappear. The inflamed joints should be fixed in a comfortable position. This can be done with pillows or by wrapping the joint firmly in layers of cotton batting, or by a well-fitted, padded splint of wood, or light plaster.

The diet should be simple and contain sufficient calories to prevent any loss of weight. Fluids should be taken freely to replace the fluid lost by excessive sweating.

Internal medicine for the relief of pain and fever must be prescribed by the physician. The pain should be controlled so that the sufferer may obtain rest. Restful sleep lessens the pain and gives the sufferer strength to overcome his siege of illness. Avoid damp places and exposure to cold and wet. The sufferer from rheumatism benefits by plenty of fresh air, sunshine and good food.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Pretender!

I made you think that I no longer cared,
That I was tired and you didn't matter;
And then, to prove my point I boldly dared
To break your heart and listen to it clatter.

I told you lies and you believed them all,
I raved about the newest lad in town;
I made you see the writing on the wall,
And bragged about the way I turned you down.

Well, now you're gone—it's time my farce was ending,
But you have made a fairer love your queen;
And I must go right on in vain, pretending
That you are but a long forgotten dream.

The game amused me, what I didn't know
—Lillian Thomas.

Story of a Song!

I went to see a yappy poodle-bird of a play Thursday night at the Playhouse—something called "Her Tin Soldier," about which the less said the better, but the evening was saved for me when Arthur Swanstrom introduced me to a genial chap named Mortimer Weinberg and the two of them crowded around and told me a yarn. It appears Weinberg kept chiding Swanstrom about his song-writing. "Why don't you sit down and turn out some popular numbers?—you could dash them off and make yourself some money." Swanstrom demurred. He didn't write that type—didn't think he could. "Nonsense," snorted Weinberg (who's an insurance man, incidentally), "anyone can. I, for instance. And I've never written a song in my life. What's more I'll write a song that'll sell." So Swanstrom wagered him he couldn't. The following morning Weinberg phoned him. "Well," he chirped, "I've written the song. Want to see it?"

The insurance man found that was a problem, too. So, first of all, he went out and bought out an obscure second-rate music publishing company and printed his song himself. Then he began hounding the orchestra leaders—begging them to play the number. Some of them he bribed in one way or another. But they began to play the song—to humor him. All this trouble he went to, mind you, to win a small $25 bet with Swanstrom that anybody could sit down and write a song number that would sell. Suddenly, for no reason, perhaps, except that people liked it, everybody began whistling and humming the tune and chirping the words. In night clubs, on the stage, at parties. You couldn't escape it. It became another "Yes, We Have No Bananas" number and finally Shapiro, Bernstein & Co. bought it and began running their presses overtime, supplying the demand. Weinberg not only won his bet—but made himself a tidy young fortune besides. He's never written another song since—perhaps because no one tempts him with a wager.

Incidentally, the ditty referred to is "Where-a You Worka, John?"

One of the big events Sunday was the shindig tossed by Leo Friede at his penthouse. All Broadway was there—try and keep the lads and gals away—when the sandwiches and drinks are free! Lupe Velez strutted in, dragging Johnny Weissmuller with her and was halted by a little blonde lass who had kept trying to attract her attention from the second she entered the room. Finally, she grabbed Lupe by the arm and said, "O Lupe, don't you remember me?" The Mexican gal surveyed her coldly and whipped back, "Yass, sure, I am remember you. I am forget your name, but you are the leedle smart girl I took Gary Cooper away from two years ago. So glad I meet you—good-bye!"

Epitaph!

(Written When Very Young)

I cared not to love you with wisdom;
I never could love you too much.
All I asked was the sweetness of knowing
The warm pulsing thrill of your touch.
I never demanded your passion;
The vague tender things that you said
Were to me like sweet cake to a beggar
Who dared only hope for dry bread.
I lived in a haze of contentment,
Well knowing it never could last.

Yet you dammed up the streams of the future

—Naomi Shaw.

G. B. S. on Air Far Different From Shaw Outlined in Print

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Well, it is now 10:30 p. m. and Bernard Shaw has just gone off the air, to sounds of applause, after one hour and three quarters of steady talking. He was addressing, as you know, some

B. E. ROGERS

I may as well say, right here, that I am one of those who have read everything Shaw has ever written and who believes firmly that he has been for the past 40 years the single most influential figure in the thought of the English speaking world. Most of the generation now growing up finds waiting it a world seriously changed in its ideas. And the most influential of these ideas have been popularized and hammered home, if not invented, by this single man.

What are the impressions then? First, of a singularly clear, strong, beautiful voice, athletic and perfect in its articulation. Not the voice of an old man at all. Next, obviously a mood of courteous seriousness. Not a trace of the wise-cracker.

Serious When Audience Is Worth It

It is perfectly clear that when he wants to be serious and dignified he can be. When the audience is worth it. That seems to imply that his famous bad manners and frivolity and sharpness are quite deliberate, largely because he knows we rise unfailingly to the bait. He said as much tonight. That seems to mean, also, that when people ask him unimportant and sassy questions his answers are deliberately as sassy and trivial. He does not suffer fools gladly.

But when "the old goat starts to blat" seriously—to quote the affectionate phrase by one of my respected colleagues—he still can blat to some considerable purpose.

He was not, I think, entirely at home with his audience. It was a bit cold and silent. The English audience is more noisy. It likes to clap and cheer and cry "hear, hear!" and the failure of our decorous academicians of political science to warm up may have bothered him a little. When he paid his respects to the Mormons for having possessed inventive political courage of a high order by instituting polygamy to save the sect, he was greeted with uncertain giggles and he had to point out that he was being very serious.

He spoke for almost an hour without applause. The most interesting thing in the entire speech was the nature of his first applause. The first time that this well-fed, well-to-do audience, full of men of affairs and politicians and scholars and journalists, broke into loud and spontaneous applause was when Shaw declared "The capitalist system has broken down!" The second, immediately afterwards, came when he added that our financial system had been run into a ditch by the financiers. He went on to say that a financier is a man who estimates the wealth of a country by multiplying the national income by twenty; "that is, he lives in a world of absolute illusion and is approximately 95 per cent a lunatic. He controls the power, the government and the religion of the modern world. Any nation which is willing to trust such power in the hands of irresponsible private individuals is made!" At which once more the applause was heavy and sincere.

Talk Seemed Simplified for Air Audience

My own opinion, after hearing him tonight, is that he is technically one of the greatest teachers in the world. We have all heard political and economic speeches, long, heavy, complex, stodgy talks, almost impossible to catch on the wing . . . like the late Mr. Hoover's campaign speeches. Readable, perhaps, not hearable.

Shaw's style is perfectly adapted to an audience. I think that perhaps he was deliberately amplifying it for the air audience. Some of it must have seemed pretty elementary to the learned men and women in front of him. For what he gave us was a little talk on political constitutions, especially our own, as breeders of anarchy, then a little talk on political economy and how the financiers can ruin a country if they are given a free hand, and finally a little lecture on international debts. He warned us that the money we spent for the war really gave us very good return; it destroyed three empires and established the Soviet government of Russia; that American machinery and engineering brains put Russia on its feet; and that if we are not fools we shall recognize that a Communistic Russia is much safer for us than a czarist or capitalist Russia.

But the point is that without hurrying, deliberately, with frequent, but not too frequent, turns of humor—he was obviously on his good behavior he expounded these things for us in the most perfect expository style I have ever listened to, with a simplicity, a clarity, an effort to be exact and not technical which was a lesson to every public speaker among us.

Visit Here Repays a Personal Debt

At the end he made a very personal point. He had come over to America, he said, to pay a personal debt. As a young man he had been interested in everything except political economy. It was a chance heard address by an American, Henry George (author of "Progress and Poverty"), that had set him to studying the question. The result of his study was his founding, with other men and women, in his own age, of the British Fabian Society, the gem of British Socialism. He warned us that British Socialism had no Marxianism in it; it was all British. And he begged America, when it came our turn to scrap our "anarchistic Constitution" for a really scientific one, not to try to imitate Russia or to try to introduce Marxism. If we follow our own political genius, in which Mr. Shaw seems to have some faith—we shall set up a system of our own which will probably work superbly well.

Toward the end of his hour and three quarters he was obviously getting a little tired. After all, the man is nearly 80! But he became, if possible, more earnest. His voice grew lower and stronger and more emphatic. You could hear his fist pounding on the desk. He spoke more slowly. There was less and less of humor in his side remarks. He gave the impression of being friendly and encouraging and earnest and even hopeful.

I hope America listened to him after all these stories we have been hearing these past few weeks. I do not doubt the stories at all. The point is that they do not matter in the least, neither his flippancies or his bad manners. His reputation is perfectly safe for centuries after we all are dead. Those who had ears to hear knew that they were listening to the Voltaire of our age. And there is no doubt at all about Voltaire!

BRIBE SCANDAL LOOMS IN TRIAL OF M'KNIGHT

Prosecution Charges Cash Paid for Building Contracts

Medford and Somerville politics circles looked with keen interest at Middlesex court today as trial of Edwin T. McKnight, president of the closed Medford Trust Co., opened before a jury.

Schoolhouse contracts, from which McKnight is alleged to have received large fees, also involve members of the Medford schoolhouse building commission and Mayor John J. Murphy, of Somerville, according to the opening of Asst. Dist.-Atty. Frederic A. Crafts.

BRIBES LINKED

Crafts added that a former member of the Medford commission will testify that he accepted bribes through McKnight in order that awards for schoolhouse construction would go to Frankini Bros. Co., Inc., whose contracts were financed by the Medford Trust Co.

A total of $33,000 was paid to the bank president on contract for schools in Medford and Somerville, the State charges. The name of the former Medford commissioner was not mentioned in the charge and may not publicly become known until the commissioner takes the witness stand.

One of the contracts under fire is that of $443,000 awarded Frankini in 1929 for construction of an addition to Medford high school. Another is the $200,000 contract, awarded by Mayor Murphy of Somerville to Frankini, the latter being listed as low bidder.

The government will show, Crafts said, that Frankini went to McKnight in regard to the Medford contract and told the bank head that he wanted the contract. McKnight is alleged to have replied that it would cost Frankini plenty of money and then he could not be sure of getting it.

CONTRACT CANCELLED

The contract, which had been awarded to Thomas O'Connor Co., as low bidder, was cancelled on O'Connor and awarded to Frankini. The government will show, according to the opening, that McKnight told O'Connor at one time: $1500 later, and $3000 still later, in addition to two payments of $1000 each, for legal charges of McKnight's law firm, Eaton & McKnight.

The Somerville contract was for work on the South Union high school in which Frankini was cited by Mayor Murphy as low bidder. Mayor Murphy will testify, Crafts said, that no one approached him in regard to the contract, that it is understood McKnight received $900 after intimations that he had "engineered" its award.

SOVIET LINKED IN PASSPORT RING FRAUD

Roxbury Man Held for Aiding Ring Activities

More Boston arrests are expected to follow soon in the investigation of an alleged passport ring that already has connected a Roxbury realtor and steamship agent with an alleged agent of Red Russia.

The Roxbury man, Benjamin Chalfen, of 1176 Columbus ave., is on bail of $6000 from federal court on a charge he aided Jacob Kreitz, now under arrest in New York, in obtaining a false passport here.

USED NAME OF DEAD VET

Kreitz was arrested as he landed at New York from a trip around the world. Federal officials said they found $28,700 on him in a canvas corset. Kreitz, known also as Albert Feierabend, was held in bail of $10,000 after officials charged he carried credentials of the Russian Soviet government.

At Boston, Kreitz is charged with obtaining a false passport, forgery of a baptismal certificate and seal of a Roman Catholic church, in order to carry out passport frauds.

Officials said he variously used the names of Ksavier Augustus Spokasa, a dead World War veteran, Francisco John Kocius and various others who have since died.

Chalfen is held in connection with the Spokasa passport, issued at Boston, September 12, 1930, and claimed he knew Kreitz by that name.

SOVIET CREDENTIALS

Federal officials at New York set a hearing for April 26 on the question of Kreitz' extradition to face the Boston charges. They said the Soviet credentials found on him when he was arrested in 1930 for smuggling watch parts read:

"July 18, 1930, No. 123—The bearer of this credential is thoroughly trustworthy and should be given all possible support so that he may effectively accomplish the mission he is engaged in. Fraternally yours, Max Bedacht, for the secretariat."

Pendie did not die, but for three days hope for her life was at dead low ebb. Then Peale, who returned instantly from his Western trip, and I were told at the hospital that she would recover.

The Chicago tragedy faded out as one newspaper vied with another to announce the startling news from Jersey City. "President's Secretary Assassinated!" "Cabinet Member's Fiance Shot Down by Gunmen!" "Dope Peddler's Widow Cries for Help!" "Miss Malloy Riddled at Cousin's Home" "Put on Spot by Drug Racketeers!" For days while Pendie lay unconscious the newspapers made holiday. Every kind of innuendo found credence.

When Pendie recovered sufficiently to tell her story the press made generous, even extravagant, amends. Pendie became something of a national heroine. The wave of public indignation at the callous brutality of her shooting knew no bounds. The underworld had struck directly at the White House itself. Everyone looked to the President to act.

Pendie had been removed from the hospital to the Lindsey house, but she was still confined to bed when I called there one morning to pick up Peale to return to Washington by plane. Peale was with Pendie, and as I was ushered into the room I was aware of a new uneasiness.

Pendie's thin features sharply emphasized the fineness of her new deeply sunken eyes, but too feverish flush on her cheeks and the nervous clutching and unclutching of her fingers was due to something more disturbing than her illness. Peale was looking at her with tenderness, but there was mixed with his gaze a strange fanatical intensity and his angular jaw jutted out hard and truculent.

A NEW CRUSADER

"Oh, Beek," Pendie cried to me, "try and make Peale promise not to go on with his crazy idea. It's not fair, it's not fair to me while I'm like this. The worry will kill me. I know it will."

This was an entirely new Pendie, semi-hysterical, wailing, using feminine tricks of helplessness to appeal to gain her ends. I was bewildered, and the more as I had not the slightest idea what it was all about. Peale walked up to her and sat on the edge of the bed. He took one of her hands in his.

"Darling, you know I adore you more than anyone else in the world. Darling, it sounds silly and melodramatic, but it's very real to me. I made a bargain that if you pulled through I'd devote myself to the extermination of these damned devils and not rest until the horror you suffered could never occur to anyone else."

He leaned over and kissed Pendie lovingly. As he stood up he said: "Don't make it too difficult, sweetheart. Try to see it my way. God kept his side of the bargain, and it's now up to me to keep mine."

* * *

A FEDERAL POLICE

As Peale and I motored out to the airport to catch our plane for Washington, I asked him whether he had any definite plans in mind.

Apparently he had not thought it out carefully, but the idea which seemed to appeal to him was that the Army should be asked to supply a volunteer corps of sharpshooters to clean up all the gangsters in Chicago and New York.

Such a plan did not seem to be very practical, but in Peale's emotional state I felt it would be unwise to argue the point.

Peale had requested an interview with Hammond and gave me a memorandum to deliver to him before the interview took place. Peale was ushered in late that evening.

"Lindsey," he said, "tomorrow I am appointing Harrison as your successor in the Department of Education, and here," handing him a paper, "is your appointment as the first Secretary of the Department of Public Safety.

"It will be one of the earliest tasks of your new department to see to it, in our cities, despite gangsters, corrupt politicians and an intimidated populace, that the law is respected, feared and obeyed."

It was now a little over two years since Hammond had dismissed Congress and assumed responsibility for government.

During these two years, despite some setbacks and many disappointments, the United States, slowly and painfully at first, but now at an ever-increasing pace, had struggled up and on toward a new prosperity.

The Department of Public Safety was welcomed everywhere except in New York, Illinois and New Jersey. In Philadelphia there was also some organized opposition to the creation of a Federal Police Force, but by this time the authority of the Governor's Council was almost absolute and little real difficulty was experienced in transfering local forces to Federal control.

In New York and Chicago the underworld was faced with extinction. Rigid Federal control made it almost impossible for its members to replenish their arsenals. People began braving the threats of gunmen to order their liquor once more from the Government stores.

A whole population could not be shot down, and the gangsters admitted defeat. That admission was a big step toward their ultimate undoing.

Driven by fear of their own men who demanded money to maintain the style of living to which they had grown accustomed, big bootleggers took to other forms of crime. A wave of kidnapings for extortion, followed by holdups, arson and blackmail brought New York and Chicago almost to a standstill. Not only ordinary commerce, but even transport of food supplies began to be affected.

Governor Dunphy of New York appealed to the State Legislature to recognize Federal control and so end the present anarchy. A few hours later he was shot dead as he was entering an automobile outside the Executive Mansion in Albany. The two gunmen responsible for the assassination were caught by the police, but a frenzied crowd snatched them out of their hands and literally pounded them

SACRED HEART CHURCH TO FR. FAHEY

Two Other Pastors Moved in Changes Announced

Six priests have been made pastors and three pastors transferred by Cardinal O'Connell to new parishes, it was announced today. The appointments become effective today, enabling the pastors to be in charge of their new fields on Easter Sunday.

The pastorates of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Roslindale, left vacant by the recent death of Father John J. Cummins, will be filled by the Rev. Timothy J. Fahey, parish priest of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Walpole, and for many years a curate at St. Joseph's Church, Roxbury.

GOES TO BROCKTON

The Rev. James J. McMorrow, brother of City Collector William M. McMorrow, of Boston, is named pastor of St. Colman's Church, Brockton. He was parish priest of St. Michael's Church, Avon.

The other pastor to be transferred is the Rev. John C. Fearns, pastor of the Sacred Heart Church, Middleboro. He becomes irremovable parish priest of the Immaculate Conception Church, Newburyport, succeeding the late Rev. Thomas P. McMannon.

The Rev. Michael J. Danehy, assistant at St. Bernard's Church, West Newton, becomes pastor of the Sacred Heart Church, Middleboro, replacing Father Fearns. The Rev. John P. O'Riordan, assistant at St Mary's Church, West Quincy, becomes pastor of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Walpole, succeeding Father Fahey.

GROTON PASTOR NAMED

The Rev. William J. Foley, assistant at St. Agatha's Church, East Milton, goes to St. Michael's Church, Avon, to fill the pastorate left vacant by the transfer of Father McMorrow.

The Rev. Hugh F. Smith, assistant at St. Joseph's Church, Wakefield, is appointed pastor of St. John's Church, East Bridgewater. The Rev. Frederick F. Muldoon, acting pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Groton, is appointed pastor of that parish. He succeeds the late Father William Farrell, noted World War chaplain.

The Rev. Francis J. Juskaplis, assistant administrator of the Church of the Immaculate Conception (Lithuanian), of Cambridge, becomes pastor of that church.

Sister Seeks Man Gone 45 Years

Miss Mary McDougall, 55, of 83 Appleton st., South End, appealed to the Boston Evening American today to find her brother Angus, 65, whom she has not seen since he left their home in Nova Scotia, 45 years ago.

When he left home he lived for a time in Bangor, Me., but moved to Boston, where she believes he still lives.

MAT SUIT READY FOR JURY

The much discussed $1,000,000 suit of Gus Sonnenberg against the Boston Herald-Traveler Corporation will go to the jury for deliberation today.

The charge of Judge Walsh to the jury on the law in the matter will be given at the opening of court today. It is expected the jury will receive the case shortly before noon.

Final arguments in the case were completed yesterday after Judge Walsh had denied motions of both sides for directed verdicts.

Sonnenberg brought suit against the newspaper publishing company for its articles published in June and July, 1929, purporting to be an expose of the alleged wrestling racket. Sonnenberg, who was world's champion at the time, claimed the articles hurt his prestige and earning power.

CASSIDY FIGHT UP TO JUDGE

The petition of Leo R. Cassidy, of Peabody, for custody of his 2-year-old son, Leo, Jr., contested by his estranged wife, Mrs. Mary Cassidy, of Salem, has been taken under advisement by Judge Harry R. Dow of Salem Probate Court.

Rodney S. Haskell, of Salem, named by the husband as in his petition filed when the husband returned early from work one night, testifying yesterday admitted he had been a beau of Mrs. Cassidy some time before her marriage.

He said he had called at the home of Miss Helen Suitzbach, in Salem, on the evening in question, when Mrs. Cassidy was visiting there. As she had her son and the baby carriage with her, he offered to drive them home, he said.

At her home he carried the carriage upstairs and they stood talking in the doorway, when Cassidy arrived, and friendly greetings passed, he said.

DIVIDEND UP TO WASHINGTON

Authorization is being awaited by the controller of currency at Washington to distribute to depositors checks representing the second dividend of 10 per cent on deposits in the closed Federal National Bank of Boston.

Maj. Herbert Pearson, receiver of the closed bank, revealed last night that the checks are now in the controller's hands and that only authorization was being awaited for their distribution. He could not state the exact date of payment because provision must be made for unproved claims.

He expressed the opinion that sufficient cash was now on hand to pay the second dividend but that Washington officials must be convinced first that there is additional money to pay the unproved claims.

His Wife Prefers Country Life

The divorce suit of Wheeler H. Lang of Central st., Somerville, brought because his wife apparently preferred life in Kingston, N. H., to the bustle of Greater Boston, has been taken under advisement by Judge Arthur E. Lane of Middlesex probate court.

Lang told Judge Beane his wife refused to live here with him where he is employed. He is a department manager of a Boston milk concern.

Father of Five Jailed for Theft

Frank Price, 43, father of five children and former foreman in the Quincy sanitary department, today started a one-year sentence in the Norfolk County House of Correction after his conviction in Dedham Superior Court yesterday.

Price was sentenced by Judge Harold P. Williams after being found guilty of charges of larceny of $1900 from the department for which he worked.

NEED MILLION FOR VETS

Boston will require nearly $1,000,000 additional a year from the city treasury for soldiers' aid payments and care, Mayor Curley as a result of the slash in veterans' compensation and pensions, according to an estimate of Capt. John J. Lydon, soldiers' relief commissioner.

Capt. Lydon revealed that his office had already received hundreds of applications for aid from persons expecting to be removed from the federal payroll rolls. He said all such cases would be carefully probed and many would doubtless prove worthy of aid.

Lydon has conferred with city officials in the matter. In addition he has conferred with federal officials in charge of the reforestation program and has asked that 1000 men now on the Boston soldiers' aid list be enlisted in the new service.

JENNIE GOLDSTEIN SCORES HIT

"The Struggle for a Mother" Gives Opportunity for Her Dramatic Talents

By HARRIS MORGAN

"The Struggle for a Mother," a Yiddish play, which opened last night before a friendly audience at the Majestic, is to be regarded primarily as a vehicle for the notable talents of Jennie Goldstein rather than as a notable drama. As the play unfolded it became clear what was meant by the ambiguous title. This should have been something like, "The Struggle Inspired by Love for a Mother"—which may not be a very ready label, but is at least an improvement over the original in clarity.

* * *

The play is melodrama, such as might legitimately happen, perhaps, in the melodramatic age. A more or less typical New York Jewish family, the Grossmans are pursued from the happiness attendant on a wedding anniversary into the gloom consequent to the husband's abandonment of his wife for a female relative of ready virtue; a mooted di- Jennie Goldstein vorce for the sake of avoiding scandal; the raising of the eyebrows of gossiping neighbors; the conviction of murder—well, this could go on indefinitely. After all, a melodrama is not to be told; it is to be heard and witnessed.

* * *

In the midst of these tense scenes Miss Goldstein has opportunity to rise to high-pitched emotionalism, which she does with the utmost conviction. Melodramatic as these scenes are, they are essentially true to phases of Jewish character. In fact, the drama was never quite so convincing as when Miss Goldstein was on the stage, whether she was raging or quiescent.

* * *

In between there were moments of comic relief, in the tradition of the Jewish stage. Some of this was not only funny but quite realistic—like the "business" of the Jewish maid who, by the way, was capably played by Miss Rabinowitch. The appearance in the last act of Jacob, father of the girl who upset the elder Grossmans's marital equilibrium, bordered on the farcical, and of course produced the requisite number of laughs.

* * *

The assisting cast is for the most part able and experienced. In general, the women are better than the men—partly because they have fatter roles. Occasionally, especially in the first part of the scene in the governors office, the enunciation is not sufficiently distinct to be heard clearly by the audience.

* * *

For the most part, however, the players are so convincing as the play will allow them to be. In this they are assisted by excellent direction, more than adequate settings and fine lighting. The death-house scene, during which is heard some gruesome singing, is especially effective.

Thomas Sings Well Selected Program

By MOSES SMITH

John Charles Thomas sang a program of German lieder, French lyrics and songs and ballads in English last night at Symphony Hall, where a sparse but friendly audience applauded him with the most pronounced expressions of approval. Edwin McArthur accompanied, and played a group of piano solos.

Most of Mr Thomas' songs were well selected. None could recall at such beautiful works as Schubert's "An die Musik" and "An die Leier," or Brahms' "O Lerchische Wangen" and "Der Tod das ist die kuhle Nacht." Similarly, the French numbers were rather trifling, were in good taste. So much augured well for an American baritone, who has studiously pursued high standards in singing since he left the popular stage.

But in singing these works Mr. Thomas, now a member of the Metropolitan Opera Co., either underrated or was overempathetic. The German songs, as he delivered them, lacked conviction occasionally, at the opposite extreme, they were distorted for the sake of dramatizing the text.

Perhaps this may be partly traced to Mr. Thomas experience on the operatic stage, on which he has attained eminence and where underlining is a matter of course. But another reason was undoubtedly the matter of taste—a suspicion which was confirmed by the singer's choice of several extra numbers. These were applause-getters of the most sentimental or bombastic type.

Karen Morley talented favorite of the screen, has one of her best roles in "Gabriel Over the White House," coming to Loew's Orpheum Friday.

Vaudeville

Keith's announces one of its most expensive and best variety bills for next Saturday, when this birthplace of vaudeville will return to its old policies of vaudeville and pictures. The management calls its program "premier Keith vaudeville." The new program will have 15 performers headed by the famous ballerina Harriet Hoctor, late star of Ziegfeld's Follies" and Earl Carroll's Vanities, who has with her her famous ballet of 18, presenting modernistic dances.

Other stars include Aileen Stanley in a modernistic interpretation of song stories, Comedian Jack Pepper in "The Spice of Life"; Rose and Bennett in "No Sense and Nonsense," and the Chung Yee Wah troupe.

"Girl Missing" on New Double Bill

Comedy and melodrama are blended in the mystery thriller, "Girl Missing," which opens at the Paramount and Fenway tomorrow for six days. The cast is headed by Glenda Farrell, Ben Lyon and Mary Brian. The other film on the same program is "Pleasure Cruise," with Genevieve Tobin, Roland Young, Ralph Forbes, Una O'Connor, Herbert Mundin and Minna Gombell.

VICTOR McLAGLEN IN ADVENTURER ROLE

Her Girlhood Ambition Is Realized

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

A wee lassie, toes a-tingle and rarin' to go . . . in the wings of a Boston theater while Pa and Ma are dancing on stage . . . Pa and Ma finish to tremendous applause . . . wee feet cannot resist, and off onto the boards they traipse . . . and bring down the house . . . That was 20 years ago . . . Rosita Moreno, then three, is now back in town, dancing star, and the wee lassie's ambition is realized—that she might follow in the steps of Pa and Ma.

Shopping along the Rialto, we see a crowd huddled . . . Crowds nowadays are numerous, mostly watching the beer guzzlers. This crowd is different . . . Edging in we see smiling beauty, she has been recognized . . . fans are asking for autographs . . . At her side is the great La Palarica, Rosita's mother . . . The third in the center is little Conchita Moreno, a cousin.

A running interview then. Yes, being in Boston again is like being in home town . . . the Metropolitan audiences are won derful to her . . . Years gone by have brought a lot of changes. Rosita is more beauteous, for one thing . . . the old theater where she made her childish bow to now in discussion . . . how that childish heart thrilled that big night! but Rosita is still there, undaunted, and the big dark brown eyes are intriguing . . .

Yes, she was here after that . . . last time was as star in "Pleasure Bound," on the Shubert stage . . . how did she get into the movies? . . . Through that musical comedy . . . Lasky and Zukor saw the film and her, invited her to a test . . . then a contract with Paramount . . . A year in Paris making foreign films . . . back to Hollywood with a Fox contract . . . Has been making Spanish pictures in Hollywood . . . Last one with the famous Jose Mojica . . . due to return to studio May 1st to begin work on "Pleasure Cruise," with Raoul Roulien . . . the Mojica film, though dialogued in Spanish, is to be shown in theaters in the United States . . . its English title is "King of the Gypsies" . . . Rosita has the feminine lead . . .

Rosita says her fan mail continues big . . . she also gets oodles of mail from Spain and Latin-American countries where the Spanish films are distributed by Fox . . .

New Honors

Pianist on Stage

Star Postpones His European Trip to Make New Film for Independent Company

Los Angeles, April 12—One hundred and fifty thousand dollars is a lot of money in any country. That is the amount set by Nat Levine for a Mascot picture he will make starring Victor McLaglen. I mention these figures because Mascot, in line with the other independent companies, seldom reaches the one hundred thousand mark. The virtue of these pictures is usually their cheap cost of production.

* * *

This $150,000 movie with the expressive title, "I'll Be Hanged If I Do," was sufficiently important to make McLaglen postpone his trip to Europe. He plays a South American adventurer who founds a new republic.

Hollywood can settle down to its knitting now. The definite announcement of Mae West's next picture has been made. At least ten different stories have been rumored but this is official. The title, "Don't Call Me Madame" originally intended for Mary Boland and Alison Skipworth, has been given to Miss West, who has written a story to fit the name. Her original play was called "Montana Belle," and it's a romantic yarn with a circus background. Claud Binyon and Frank Butler are adapting the story. Wesley Ruggles will direct and prepare to see the flamboyant Mae in circus tights.

MR. BOSTON

Baseball Now King Greatest of Sports Has Wide Appeal

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

Baseball is once more king. Other forms of athletics will have to take back seats while the National and American League clubs get under way in new flag fights.

Football, hockey, wrestling, golf, boxing and tennis have at times challenged the position of baseball as our national pastime, but they have each in turn been swept aside. Baseball still has the greatest appeal to the rank and file of Americans. All classes, all types, attend ball games. It is the one sport the bootblack and bank president share in common.

I believe baseball magnates have at times worried unnecessarily about the progress of golf. They have feared it was injuring attendance figures at the ball games. Golf, of course, has caused some people to spend time on the links rather than at ball games.

I believe that with first class teams in Boston this loss caused by golf would not be noticed. There are thousands of new sports fans, and they would more than offset any attendance losses resulting from golf or other branches of athletics.

The wider use of the automobile is an aid to baseball. This is particularly true on Sundays when 50 per cent of the crowd motors here from out of town.

The experts agree the Yankees will win the pennant in the American League, while they maintain the Pirates will finish out front in the National League. The same experts have Red Sox and Braves doing excavation work at the bottoms of their circuits. I am cheering for our local teams, so cast off inferiority complexes and prove the experts are wrong. Of course it is not difficult to prove an expert to be out in left field. Perhaps the writers picked the Braves and Sox to make poor showings from force of habit.

I might remind you of the 1914 Braves, who galloped from last place on July 4 to a pennant and then a world's championship, but if I did you would probably say I was sitting in with Win Brooks and Paul Whelton as they consumed all of that 3.2 beer in their tests for science and the arts.

Lower Price Scale Will Aid Baseball

The increased number of 50-cent seats will aid baseball. Baseball was built up with thousands of seats at 25 cents. Then came the tremendous grandstands and pavilions. The 25-cent seats were eliminated.

Other than for box seats, baseball did not increase its grandstand prices. Therefore, no readjustment of these prices is necessary. I believe baseball gives one more for his money than you receive from any other sport.

Pres. John A. Heydler of the National League and Pres. Will Harridge of the American League insist the players display more fight and pep during the games this year. They intend to war on friendliness with rival players.

The league heads did not mention anything about friendliness with umpires. In recent years ball players have been under too many foolish restrictions. Players have been suspended or fined for minor run-ins with umpires or rival players. This has caused them to lose spirit and play mechanical baseball.

John McGraw, Hughy Jennings, Jesse Burkett, Hugh Duffy, Ty Cobb, Bill Carrigan and other famous baseball characters blazed their way to the heights by fighting for every advantage. Prosperity's boom crash made a docile people. The depression has at least aroused our fighting spirit again. "This new condition will probably be reflected in the playing of our baseball teams if the league officials will forget some of their Sunday school regulations.

Schmeling-Baer Bout Is Certain for New York

With Max Baer telling the gang along Broadway what a great fighter he is and Max Schmeling on his way to New York aboard the Bremen all doubt about the two Maxes meeting in the ring has been eliminated. The date for the contest has been definitely set for June 8. As has been previously stated in this column, Tim Mara has handled the important details in connection with the match in New York.

Nobody has ever had to show Mara around Broadway.

Schmeling will be in Boston next Tuesday night for his exhibition matches at an Argonne A. A. show at the Arena. Jack Dempsey will referee.

Eddie Mack tells me Babe Hunt and Red Barry should put up a stirring battle when they collide in a 10-round bout on the same card. Barry was good enough to win a decision over Unknown Winston.

Random Shots at the Target

Ed Don George, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, has signed to defend his title under the direction of Paul Bowser at the Boston Garden on April 21 . . . The champion's opponent has not yet been named . . . Ace Bailey of the Toronto Maple Leafs, who dislocated his shoulder in the first of the playoff games with the Bruins, suffered a torn cartilage in his knee when checked by Ching Johnson of the Rangers last night . . . This injury will keep Bailey out of the game for the rest of the series . . . My dope was okay when I picked the Leafs to win the third game . . . The Bruin Cubs voted Joe Gilmore, their trainer, a first share of the playoff money.

Matman Spurned 25 G's to Fix Go!

St. Louis, Mo., April 12 (US)—Pat O'Shocker, pro. wrestler, had stated here today that last September, in New Haven, Conn., he was offered $15,000 and then $25,000 if he would agree to have his match with Jim Londos fixed so that he, O'Shocker, would win.

O'Shocker's charges were inspired by the conclusion of a Chicago match in which Joe Savoldi, not given an outside chance to win from Londos, was awarded the winning fall.

O'Shocker said he refused to join in the deal when the offer was raised to $25,000, and that the match went on, with Londos winning.

Tech Crews to Race Marietta on Ohio

Technology will send two crews of varsity and junior varsity, to row Marietta College on the Ohio river, Saturday, May 13, it was announced by Tech officials.

Crimson '36 Nine Plays St. Mark's

The Harvard freshman baseball nine play its opening game of the season this afternoon when it engages St. Mark's at Southbridge at 4 o'clock. Although the pre-season work has been necessarily short because of cold weather, the frosh athletes are in fairly good condition for the initial contest.

Strack to Wrestle Dawkins at Chelsea

Captain Ferarai, at Battery H, Chelsea, will present another wrestling card Monday night. Charlie Strack will meet Scotty Dawkins.

There is a tussle between Rudy LaDitzi and Sam Skorski. They are in the semifinal. In the special, Boris Demetroff of Russia will engage in a bout with Jack Ross.

BROWNING PINS ED LEWIS

Chicago, April 12 (AP)—Jim Browning defeated Ed "Strangler" Lewis in one hour, three minutes and 32 seconds with a turnover scissors in a wrestling show here.

The sport has been banned by the Illinois Athletic Commission as a result of the match between Joe Savoldi and Jim Londos.

It had been announced yesterday that the Browning-Lewis fray was cancelled because of the Illinois mat ban.

Louisville, Ky., April 12 (AP)—Karl W. Malone, secretary of the National Wrestling Association, announced suspension by the association of Joe Savoldi.

Malone said Savoldi was suspended at the request of Indiana athletic officials who reported Savoldi failed to fulfil a contract at Evansville Monday night. Malone said the suspension would be recognized in 26 member states of the association.

Yankees, Gehrig Seek New Records

New York, April 12 (AP)—The New York Yankees faced the opening of the major league season with one remarkable record intact.

When the world champions played their final game last fall they completed a string of 21 games without a shutout. The streak began on August 2, 1931.

Lou Gehrig, wallloping first baseman, also has his eye on Everett Scott's record of playing in 1307 consecutive games. Gehrig's string has reached 1197.

Bell Eliminated From N-S Net Grind

Pinehurst, April 12 (AP)—Berkeley Bell, seeded 8th, was eliminated from the north and south tennis tournament by Charles Harris, 3—8, 8—7, 6—4.

Bell's downfall was the only upset in the second day of the tournament that saw all of the other seeded stars, headed by Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, advance through the third round of men's singles play.

Baer Weighs 230; Opens Work Today

New York, April 12 (AP)—Max Baer, curley-headed young California giant, climbed into fight togs and gave the experts who haven't seen him in action here for almost three years one of the biggest surprises of their lives.

He weighed 202 when he departed the New York scene after beating Levinsky in 1930. When he stepped on the scales today he weighed 230 pounds.

Harvard Schedules Hard Ring Program

Syracuse, Eastern intercollegiate boxing champion, and U. of Virginia, champs of the Southern Conference, will offer the highlights on the Harvard boxing schedule for next winter. Encouraged by the fine showing of the Crimson boxers during the past season, Harvard athletic authorities arranged a long list for next winter.

Syracuse, Virginia, New Hampshire, Coast Guard, Springfield City College of New York, Mass. Tech, and Yale are on the 1933 list. The team will also compete at the national intercollegiate championships at Penn State College.

Y. M. H. A. Mat, Ring Bouts on Saturday

The annual boxing and wrestling championships are listed for Saturday night at the Boston Y. M. H. A. gym on Seaver st., Roxbury.

These boys, of all ages from 12 years upward, have been training all season under Coaches Milton Krook and Arthur Klein. About 60 entries have been turned in.

Wrestling Results

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO TEAM IN BOUTS HERE

Chicago will make a stout-hearted bid for the titles in the national amateur boxing championships at the Arena on April 24, 25 and 26. Nine entries from Chicago have been received by Bill Kenney who is in charge of the championship contests.

N.U. Trackmen Drill for Wildcat Meet

Northeastern's track and field forces are being driven at top speed by Varsity Coaches Joe Zeller and Ed Parsons in preparation for the opening dual meet with New Hampshire at Durham, ten days away.

Capt. Elmer MacKenzie, Northeastern's hurdles champion, is recovering from an ankle injury and hopes to enter both hurdle races against the Wildcats.

Bob Grieve and Harry Gurske scored in the quarter a year ago and Stanley in the 880, while Sam Chernack and Ed Urban picked up odd points in the pole vault.

Lacrosse Club Foe for Terriers Today

The Lacrosse Club has many former college and Olympic stars in its lineup. Joe Sullivan, Boston University's lacrosse coach, is also a member of the club team and will play part of the game against his pupils.

Sonny Pins Wagner in Brockton Bout

(AP)—Gus Sonnenberg took the first and third falls to win the main bout of a wrestling show from Cowboy Jack Wagner 2/4, of Providence, R. I., in a show at Brockton. Sonny used his flying tackle in taking both falls.

Stormy Skies for Openers

AMERICAN LEAGUE

	Probable Pitchers	Probable Weather
Boston at New York	Andrews vs. Gomez	Rain
Phila. at Washington	Grove vs. Crowder	Cloudy
Cleveland at Detroit	Brown vs. Bridges	Fair, Cold

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Pittsburgh at Cincinnati	Swift vs. Johnson	Clear, Cool
St. Louis at Chicago	Dean vs. Warneke	Fair, Warmer
Brooklyn at Philadelphia	Clark vs. Moore	Showers

DEVENS HURLS NO-HIT WIN

New Haven, April 12 (AP)—Charley Devens, who used to pitch for Harvard against Yale, returned as one of the Yankees and set his old rivals down without a hit or a run in the Yanks' final exhibition game before the opening of the American League season, New York won 6 to 0.

Devens fanned 14 Yale batters but his no-hit feat was due largely to the superb fielding of the world's champions. He yielded four bases on balls and the Yanks made two errors behind him.

S. J. Poe Dies; Four Brothers Left

Baltimore, April 12 (AP) On a November afternoon in 1882, S Johnson Poe scored a touchdown for Princeton against Columbia and opened a page in football history that is without parallel.

He was the first of the six Poe brothers of Baltimore, who for two decades brought delight to Nassau supporters with their football prowess. He died in Washington.

With the death of S. Johnson Poe, four of the famous brothers are left. John Prentice Poe, was killed in France in 1918 when his regiment, the Black Watch of Scotland, was ordered over the top.

The living brothers are Edgar Allan Poe and Gresham Poe of Baltimore; Nelson Poe of Princeton, and Arthur Poe of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Corbett-McLarnin Fray Almost Set

Los Angeles, April 12 (AP)—The young Corbett-Jimmy McLarnin fight for the welterweight championship of the world lacked only the signatures today for a go at Wrigley Field here the night of May 20.

Under the terms, Corbett will receive $35,000, or a percentage should the gate gross $100,000 or more. McLarnin is to get 20 per cent.

ALL VETERANS

All the way down or up from Betts, the starting Warriors are veterans. The highly-touted Al Wright and Dick Gyselman, the hard-hitting Art Hunt and all the rest of the flashy youths will watch from the bench, while the 40-year-old Maranville, the bald-pated Urbanski and the experienced Berger, Worthington, Schulmerich, Jordan and Hogan do the playing.

The Giants, opening their first season in 20 with a manager other than Little Napoleon, John Joseph McGraw, succeeded by Bill Terry in the middle of last season, will present a few new young faces. That's solely because Terry has no veterans available for the spots the kids are occupying.

One of these lads is Blondy Ryan of Lynn, who gained fame on the diamonds and gridiron at Holy Cross a few years back. He was tried out and found wanting by the White Sox only to pop up again as the Giants' shortstop.

He's supposed to be relieved in a few weeks by Travis Jackson, the ace of the National League shortstops for the past decade, who is ailing with a foot injury. Many well-informed critics insist, however, that Jackson will not be fit to play for months and that even if he were fit today, the light-hitting but superbly fielding Ryan would still have the call.

INTRODUCING HANK LIEBER

The majorities are optimistic as they await the ringing of the gong. They have cut salaries and expenses to the bone and they look for tense, tight races that will keep the turnstiles clicking merrily until fall.

But they aren't so confident that they're unwilling to try an innovation or two to increase the game's appeal.

President John Heydler of the National League has informed his clubs that the success of baseball this season depends upon the hustle and fight the players display. He has ordered all hands to be aggressive on the ball field and to refrain from fraternizing with opponents before, during or after games.

The fans will toss the National League "prexy" plenty of cornish for that order and will keep busy on tossing the owners plenty of green-backs if these fighting orders are obeyed.

The other openers today will find the Cards and Cubs battling at Chicago, the Dodgers seeing the Phillies, the Pirates at Cincinnati, the St. Louis Browns entertaining the White Sox and Cleveland at Detroit.

SOX BATTLE YANKS

The Red Sox, our other big league entry, make their season's bow in the Yankee stadium against New York's world's champions. That's a tough assignment for the McManusmen, but there's nothing to lose about the check they'll carry away from the big town. Close to 50,000, the largest crowd of the day, will attend the opener in [illegible].

President Roosevelt will close shop at the Capitol at noon to get his salaried wing in shape to throw out the first ball at the Senators-Athletics clash. This is the first time he has been called upon to toss the agate in his capacity as Chief Executive, yet he's an old hand at the game. During his years at Albany, he did plenty of flinging.

Baseball owners, however, are far more interested in the President's new deal than they are in his control. A wild pitch would be nothing out of their pockets, but another season like they had last year would have many of them well on the road to the poor house.

PLAYERS TO BE SCRAPPY

The majorities are optimistic as they await the ringing of the gong. They have cut salaries and expenses to the bone and they look for tense, tight races that will keep the turnstiles clicking merrily until fall.

Recent Presidents Real Baseball Fans, Coolidge Friendly With Bucky Harris.

—By BILL CORUM—

Toronto, April 12 (US)—This is the first time I ever tried to cover the opening of the baseball season from Canada, but it seems a pleasant enough place from which to do it. The Yankees open against the Boston Red Sox in New York today and the chances are you can get a very good perspective on that from here.

Down in Washington, at the opening game between the Senators and Philadelphia Athletics, President Roosevelt will throw out the first ball. He should be a great trim for the assignment, for has been throwing out bankers all spring.

PRESIDENT MAKES HISTORY

President Roosevelt, who has been making more than his share of history the past five weeks, will be making more history when he tosses out the first ball tomorrow.

It is a coincidence, or maybe just good politics, but nearly all of our recent Presidents have seemed to have a genuine fondness for baseball.

But it was the undemonstrative Mr. Coolidge who really became the red-hot baseball follower while he was an occupant of the White House. That was in the days when Stanley Harris was bringing the capital its first championship. The President and Mrs. Coolidge met young Harris and liked him. When they learned the story of how he had worked his way up from a mine boy they liked him even more.

Bucky was a popular idol in Washington in those days and it wasn't long until he was being invited to various functions at the White House. The Coolidges attended his wedding in Washington, making the affair memorable if not unique, and I suspect that Stanley Harris always had a real friend in Calvin Coolidge.

COOLIDGE A REAL FAN

In any case, Mr. Coolidge was not the least pleased of the Washington fans the day that Walter Johnson came back to steal a field in the ninth inning of the first game of baseball ever played between the Giants in one of the most dramatic stands the old game has ever known. He was more than pleased.

He was, I think, secretly elated, and as far as a President of United States, a neutral, and a Calvin Coolidge could, he showed it.

Mr. Hoover was not only a fan, but also a peanut eating fan. He understood the game perfectly and followed it carefully. During three World Series he was practically a mascot for Connie Mack's Athletics, and looked for a time as though they couldn't lose when he was a spectator.

Then the Cardinals with, as I recall, Burleigh Grimes, no respecter of persons or jinxes, pitching broke through the A's presidential string.

That was the day the bleacherites hooted "We want beer!" at Mr. Hoover as he marched to his box. In a rock-ribbed and ultra-conservative Republican city, the thing came close to being a demonstration. It was, had we known it, an omen.

BOSTON CLUB 5-1 VICTOR AT GARDEN

By BILL GRIMES

While the Bruin Cubs were walking through the Philadelphia Arrows to win their first Can-Am Fontaine Cup series game 5 to 1 at the Boston Garden, the Toronto Maple Leafs scored their initial victory over the New York Rangers, 3 to 2, in the Stanley Cup N. H. L. drive

The Cubs and Maple Leafs were short enders, having lost the two previous championship tilts. The Cubs had dropped two close games in the Quaker City. The Leafs were recovering from the effects of their strenuous series with the Bruins.

Because they are both playing on their home ice, the Cubs and Leafs will be favorites to even up their respective series tomorrow night.

However, Toronto will not be at full strength as Ace Bailey received a torn cartilage when he was checked by Chief Johnson in the second period and according to reports is out for the year. Possibly Bailey will stage another one of those miraculous recoveries such as he, Joe Primeau, Ken Doraty, Bob Gracie and Red Horner did during the Boston series.

TEAMS COME FROM BEHIND

By a strange coincidence, the Cubs and the Leafs both came from behind to win last night. The Cubs were trailing by one goal at the end of the first period but the Bruinchermen went out in front in the second period, while the Leafs were deadlocked at the start of the final chapter, during which they scored twice.

The Cubs were badly outplayed during the first period and were lucky that the Arrows did not score more than one goal. The Philadelphia tally was a clever piece of combination by Tommie Anderson and Yank Boyd late in the period.

Ted Saunders scored the equalizer early in the second canto on another smart play after Sheldon Buckler had teamed with Pinkie Davis to give the Cubs the lead on a goal which was wildly protested by the Arrows. Frank Jerwa stepped into the picture, scoring three times in the third period.

Apparently the Maple Leafs decided that if they were going down to their third straight defeat before the Rangers, they would go down fighting. The first period was a wild affair, during which Referee Odie Cleghorn dealt out 11 penalties, six of which were against the Rangers. There were penalties called during the game, the Blue Shirts receiving two more than the Stanley Cup defenders.

DILLON SETS RECORD

Cecil Dillon set up a new playoff record when he scored his eighth goal of the series early in the first period. At the time that Dillon put the Rangers out in front Bun Cook was serving a penalty and the Leafs were caught napping when the ex-Springfield Indian broke away and counted.

Ken Doraty, right winger who was here of the marathon Bruin-Toronto game, is again the fair haired boy. Doraty scored two of the three Toronto goals last night and has practically insured his job with the Smythemen for next season. After Butch Keeling equalized for the Rangers in the third period, Red Horner came through with the deciding tally.

From a financial viewpoint, the Cub and Toronto victories were of great importance. The Cubs are deep in the red, and tomorrow night's game will wipe out some of their deficit. The Maple Leafs have played four championship games in Toronto and, after tomorrow night's contest, the extra games will have brought receipts over the $100,000 into the coffers.

Prior to the start of the Bruin series, Maple Leaf games approximately 27 per cent behind last year's figures, but now they are beyond the quota set for this year.

Brilliant Stand by Cub Netminder Puts Club Back in Cup Fight

Derby Keeps Position at Turf Ladder's Top

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Col. Matt Winn, the master of Churchill Downs, has been traveling in the East for several days.

Churchill Downs, one of the oldest, and most picturesque of our American race courses, is at Louisville, Kentucky. It is there they run the famous Kentucky Derby next month. The Derby is the greatest of what the boys call the "big classics" in the matter of public interest and color.

There are more valuable stakes even now in an era of stake-cutting among them the Futurity and the Belmont Stakes in New York. But even when other stakes were greater than the Derby purse, the Kentucky event remained the headliner with the general public.

DERBY CLASSIC EVENT

I presume it is because the Kentucky Derby is usually the meeting ground of the horse lovers from East, West and South in prosperous times it has brought out crowds of upwards of 75,000.

It is the only turf event that brings out newspaper writers from all over the country, the same as a World Series, or a big prize fight. And no one who has seen a Derby eve in Louisville will say that the trip to Kentucky has been in vain.

But a few weeks ago, Colonel Winn announced that the Derby purse remains $50,000 added money, and most turfmen thought that a smart move. Smart, because it lets the Derby keens all its old importance, and luster, and moves it even higher up in the matter of value among the turf stakes.

It may cost Colonel Matt Winn something to preserve the stake at $50,000, but he probably realizes that he will eventually get it all back with interest. The colonel is a great turf showman, and he realizes the advertising value of keeping the Derby at par.

WINS OPTIMISTIC

"It look for an exceptionally large crowd in Louisville next month," said Colonel Winn, "as how years seem to rest lightly on his shoulders.

"All right," I said, "now tell me—but will win the Derby?"

"The field," said Colonel Winn calmly. "Look to are no less than 25 horses go to the post, course that will bunch a lot of them in what is designated as the field in the pari-mutuel betting. So that's why I say the field." He added, "It is a grand free-for-all, and that is the kind of race I like to see."

Derby Nominee Wins to Pay $35.80 for $2

Lexington, Ky., April 12 (AP)—Taking to the mud like a duck to water, Warren, Jr., Kentucky Derby nominee of Calumet Farm, became the second Derby eligible to win a race in Kentucky.

He defeated the favorite, C. C. Van Meter's Red Whuk, by four lengths in the Steelers Purse over the Futurity course yesterday, paying $35.80 for $2 to win.

Red Roamer, the Lehus Brothers' Derby candidate, was third in the field of five four of which were eligible for the $5,000 added stake to be raced at Churchill Downs May 6.

RAM NINE NEXT B. C. OPPONENT

The tardy construction of the new baseball diamond at University Heights has necessitated the postponement of the B. C. baseball game with the Harvard Grads slated for Saturday, until May 13.

Coach Frank McCrehan will now have a full week of two practice sessions a day to prepare for the opening intercollegiate tilt with Fordham on Patriots' Day. The college vacation commences this afternoon, but it only means more intense work for the baseball men.

The golf team leaves this afternoon for the South, where it opens on Saturday at the Yorktown Country Club against William and Mary. The team has the U. of North Carolina, Washington and Lee, Georgetown, Catholic Univ., Princeton and Pennsylvania on the vacation program.

Capt. Jack Kerran and his tennis team will take off Saturday morning and go as far south as Duke University in North Carolina. On their homeward trip they meet Georgetown, U. of Virginia and U. of Virginia and William and Mary.

When Will the Ice Go Out?

My forecast is that the ice will leave Maine's famous fishing waters as follows:

LAKE	DATE	HOUR	MINUTE
Grand Lake in the Grand Lakes region.....
Mooselookmeguntic Lake in the Rangeley region
Moosehead Lake in the Moosehead region.....
Square Lake in the Fish River chain

HERE ARE THE RULES:

1—All entries must be made on the accompanying blank and mailed to Fish and Game Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

2—Contest open to all except employes of Hearst papers, members of the Maine Development Commission and Maine Fish and Game Commission.

3—Each contestant is eligible for only one guess. Any contestant sending closest or first two guesses has his choice of prizes offered for those guesses.

4—This contest will automatically close at midnight, April 21. If the ice leaves on his or on before that date, no entries received later than that second day before the ice has left the lake shall be considered with relation to the prize offered for that lake.

5—The date, hour and minute as reported by each lake by George J. Stobbs, Maine Commissioner of Inland Fisheries and Game, shall govern the decision of the judge. The judge will be the Fish and Game Editor, whose decision will be final.

PRENN BAN HITS CUP HOPES

Berlin, April 12 (AP)—The Davis Cup hopes of Germany today were wrecked by the Hitler government's ban on Jews as the cup committee dropped its leading player and former captain, Daniel Prenn, because of his race.

The disbarment left Germany with only Baron von Cramm to renew the campaign which twice in four years had carried her to the interzone final against the United States.

Prenn has been Germany's leading player for several years and in 1932 was one of the 10 or 15 best in the world.

Harvard Lacrosse Team Plays Tech

Harvard's varsity lacrosse team opens its home season this afternoon when it meets the M. I. T. lacrosse men at the Business School Field, Allston, at 4:30 o'clock. The Crimson had already played two games in the South, losing to St. John's of Annapolis and tieing Navy during the spring holidays.

The Harvard lineup has Cleaves at goal, Rogers, cp, David, p; Thorndike, 1d, Rabinowitz, 2d, Hooper, c, Fo ne, 2a; Graziano, 1a, Owens, oh; Tucker, 1h.

SHIFTS AHEAD FOR B. U. NINE

There may be a great deal of shifting on the Boston University baseball squad during the next few days according to Coach John Harmon.

At first base Coach Harmon has four men who are battling for the job. Jerry Donovan, regular last year, has a slight edge, but Lou Rosnitsky, Christie Harris and Bill Higginson are all good ball players. Two of these boys may be shifted to the outfield.

Today and tomorrow the teams will be divided and sent through two long practice games. Friday the boys will go through a morning and afternoon batting session for the Harvard game Saturday.

SOCCER LOOP REPORT SOON

New England soccer fans will have some definite news regarding the formation of a New England division of the American Soccer League this week-end when Secretary Sam Fletcher makes his report at the meeting called by President Nat Agar.

With Boston, Ball River, New Bedford, Pawtucket and Central Rhode Island, lined up at the start of the campaign, Fletcher was expected to get three more clubs or at least two.

The amateur clubs in this State have been doing well during the spring campaign and it is evident that the major leaguers are not going to stand idle and see the semi-pros thrive.

Illinois Solons O. K. 15-Round Bill

Springfield Ill., April 12 (US)—A bill permitting boxing bouts to go 15 rounds in Illinois, if approved by the State athletic commission, was passed today by the House and will go to Governor Horner for signature. The measure will allow Chicago to stage important matches during the World's Fair.

LEAFS DEFEAT RANGERS, 3-2

Toronto, April 12 (US)—A desperate, last period rally, which netted two goals, gave the Toronto Maple Leafs a 3 to 2 win over the New York Rangers here, in the third game of the playoff final for the Stanley Cup and the world's hockey championship.

Arena Program

First go, 8 p. m.; main go, 10 p. m.
MAIN BOUT
Bull Martin vs. Leo Papianos
(Two falls out of three—no time limit).

SEMIFINAL

OTHER BOUTS
Charlie Manoli vs. Pete Sturges.
John Speilman vs. Joe Kuljot.
Regis Riki vs. Pat O'Hara.
Nick Karavas vs. Al Del Orio.
George Linnehan vs. Kewpie Kilroy.

George Myerson vs. Gil Cross.
Zeus Wilczewski vs. Jim Wallis.
Jack Walsh vs. Bull Currie.
George Saunders vs. Harry Lundin.
Tarsan Weiner vs. Johnny Lopez.

Bull Martin will be a 5-to-4 favorite to gain revenge on Leo Papianos in the feature fray of Steve McPherson's 12-bout wrestling show at the Arena tonight.

Martin, at 240 pounds, is in great shape. He and Papianos, at 218, meet in a two out of three falls match with no time limit.

Papianos slugged Martin with a "loaded" fist in a recent bout at the Arena and was banned by McPherson. Martin forced the promoter to lift the ban on the Greek so that he could get personal satisfaction.

Bob Russell, Newport Rebel, will meet Odilio Marchioni in the semifinal, while Charlie Manoli will meet Pete Sturges, conqueror of George Myerson, the middleweight champion, in another standout.

Bear will be on sale at the Arena tonight. The concessionaire has his garden and a large supply of the 3.2 brew on hand.

It will be the first wrestling show in Boston at which beer can be had since 1920.

HARVARD JOINS DIAMOND LOOP

Harvard, now a member of the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League, is making preparations for its next league clash with Princeton at Princeton on April 19.

With the announcement that the Crimson has joined the loop Fred Mitchell's squad has a new incentive with the chance of carrying off the pennant.

Harvard is now on top of the league with Columbia having defeated Penn last Saturday while Yale was losing to Columbia. Other members who have not yet played a league game are Dartmouth, Cornell, and Princeton.

The Crimson nine will play two games with each opponent. It is expected that the first two games with Yale will be league contests and that the Crimson and Blue will play a third game, if necessary, to decide their own rivalry.

Mephisto Defeats Passas in Mat Go

Joe Howard and Ralph Wells, 30m., draw.
Frankie Pearson and Eddie Martin, 30m., draw.
Frank Edieet and Mike McDonald, 30m., draw.
Ray DuLong and Eddie Moore, 30m., draw.
Bob Burdick and Ted Powers, 30m., draw.
Herbie Stone and Lloyd Stewart, 10m., draw.
Ray Souleyman and Cowboy Hughes, 10m., draw.
Fred Evans and Henry Trullinger, 10m., draw.
Mickey Roache and Gardner Mindee, 10m., draw.
Nick Coste and Mike Tellegee, 10m., draw.
Jackie Nichols defeated Stewart Spears, 12m., 35s.
Ted Germain defeated Al Staples, 8m., 6s.
Teddy Mack defeated Win Robbins, 10m., 40s.

Belmont Cuts Race Program 12 Days

New York, April 12 (AP)—Failure of the State Senate to legalize betting will force Belmont Park to cut its spring racing program in half and institute sharp reductions in ticket prices.

Belmont's spring meeting probably will be held from May 17 to June 10, a total of 12 racing days as compared with 24 a year ago.

to pulp on the sidewalk. Two days later New York and New Jersey accepted the President's authority and within a week Illinois did likewise. Thus did the rule of Washington finally come to blanket the entire nation.

It was about this time I arrived in Chicago as commandant of "B" Company of the Federal Mobile Police.

Much had happened since Peale's interview with the President nine months before. As head of the Department of Public Safety, Peale had driven through the federalization of police with single-minded determination. Though he was ruthless where corruption or incompetence was discerned, his tact, efficiency and devotion to his job gained the respect and support of all ranks under his command.

The Federal Mobile Police Force was limited to 2000 men, divided into four companies. Except on big-scale operations, they generally worked in small groups or alone. Their mounts were motorcycles. Each man was a swift and deadly shot, with both revolver and rifle. Their open-necking tunics and shirts were dark green and there was a dark green band round their big 4-peaked caps. A broad green stripe ran down the side of their black trousers which fitted into high-laced boots. A lighter green webbing belt served as a bandolier. The revolver holster in polished black leather hung from the belt and the black service cord attached to the gun passed over the left shoulder. When in a day of their first parade in uniform they became irresistibly known as the "Green Jackets."

DEATH TO OFFENDERS

Peale set up an invaluable auxiliary—a special secret service bureau which obtained from local police headquarters the photographs, names, addresses, aliases and criminal histories of all known criminals in the Chicago area.

The ostensible job of the Green Jackets was to search for unsurrendered arms. Most often guns were handed over peaceably and in areas made without fuss. Occasionally, however, a fight ensued, but the odds were generally on the side of the Green Jacket. Ordinarily jails and courts were not used for those arrested by the Green Jackets. The county jail harbor, Ellis Island, no longer needed for immigrants, was converted into a special detention camp for such offenders as tried and failed to stand off this arm of the Federal police.

If a gunman surrendered freely no charges were taken of previous crimes. He was merely sent to join the convict labor battalions working on the Waterway reservoir, ostensibly as a penalty for his crime in possession of arms.

It was a different story if he fired on either Green Jacket or federal policemen. He was then sent to Ellis Island to be tried before a special court and his previous record was used in evidence against him. Each case was heard before three judges, one of whom had to be a member of the Supreme court. A unanimous verdict was required and no appeal permitted. The prisoner was allowed any lawyer he could get to defend him, the cost being defrayed by the government. The penalty for resisting arrest with weapons of any kind was death before a firing squad at dawn. Only one gunman out of 10 ever left Ellis Island alive.

After several months' training in smaller cities my full company was ordered to Illinois to attack the remnants of Chicago's underworld.

The night of my arrival found me in close conference with Chicago's new chief of police, Joseph Perlmain. I was accompanied by Lieut. Brody, my second in command, and the purpose of our talk was to map out a plan of campaign.

Asserting my authority, I ultimately convinced them that the only way to deal decisive blow at the whole underworld organization was to get the leaders first. I was agreed on warrants covering next day at 3 a. m. About 30 of the recognized leading racketeers were to be arrested on warrants charging possession of firearms.

The operation was largely successful. The element of surprise and the speed with which each raid was carried out upset the precautions taken by the gang leaders, so that before most of them fully realized what was happening they were behind the bars. Five Green Jackets were shot, but none killed.

The simplest capture was that of the Brothers Borelli.

But our satisfaction was incomplete because we had failed to get "Wolf" Miller. Three others had similarly not been located. In the course of the day we obtained fairly definite information as to their whereabouts, and I detailed men to take up their trail. Within a week two had been arrested in view Orleans and Denver, and the third was shot while resisting capture in his roadster near Buffalo.

There may have been a little network rivalry involved, since Mr. Shaw did his coast to coasting exclusively through NBC facilities last night. Still the effort should be at least recognized, in the light of that "Nothing Ventured, Nothing Gained" saying.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

Copyright, 1933, for the Boston Evening American.

Etiquette of the Street

Note—We continue our educational campaign from Hill's Manual of Social Forms (1880):

LADIES and gentlemen meeting on the sidewalk should take care not to step backward into the gutter and injure themselves.

No gentleman should stand on the street corner or steps of hotels and make remarks about ladies passing by.

A gentleman may take two ladies upon his arm but under no circumstances should the lady take the arms of two gents.

A gentleman will assist a lady over a muddy crossing or from an omnibus without the formality of an introduction. When service is performed he will lift hat, bow and pass on.*

*Scram.

TRIUMPH OF THE MACHINE AGE

VANCOUVER, B. C.—A "punctuality machine" which flashes a cheerful "welcome" to prompt students and a sarcastic "late again" to those who are tardy has been invented by Dr. G. M. Warner's Bank Warning

Why Does Legislature Hesitate?

Having read Attorney-General Warner's able statement, you wonder why the Legislature hesitates to adopt the laws which he proposes to guard the Commonwealth's banks in the future from possible spoliation by crooked officials, thereby backing up Roosevelt's plans along the same line.

Warner tells you that Banker Deery was warned in 1929 by the Bank Commissioner against the speculative practises that led to the destruction of the Salem Trust Company only two years later.

He informs you that Banker Deery told the Bank Commissioner to mind his own business.

This Deery could do safely, because there was no law, such as Mr. Warner now proposes, that would allow the State to get rid of errant, unworthy bank officials.

Deery is now in jail, it is true, but his imprisonment does not restore to the several thousands of people the millions of dollars they subsequently lost after the warning of the Bank Commissioner had been scorned.

If so, these legislators should pass an evening in the home of some depositor whose life has been made miserable by the practices which Attorney-General Warner condemns and which he desires to protect the State against in the future.

They Won't Fight

Young Pacifists Will Change

Some students at Boston University have signed a declaration that they would not fight for their country under any circumstances.

This is somewhat of a different type of patriotism than was expressed by Alexander Pope, "And for our country 'tis a blessing to die."

Somewhat different than the mother who exclaimed, "Had I a dozen sons, I had rather eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action."

Somewhat different than the toast of Admiral Stephen Decatur, "Our country! In her intercourse with foreign Nations may she always be right but our country right or wrong."

These are young men, who have imbibed the pacifism they believe to be a modern vogue but which is so old that it led to the decadence and subjugation and misery of China and India.

No sane man wants war. Every sane man wants peace. Every patriotic man wants that peace to be maintained without dishonor, however.

These young men, as they grow older, will begin to think to themselves whether a country that is good enough to afford them the opportunity of a college education is a country that should be repudiated in her possible hour of need, and despite the justice of her cause.

Saving Our Navy Yard

Reasons Are Many

Congressman Arthur D. Healey invites the Boston Evening American to set before Congress the reasons why the Charlestown Navy Yard should be retained.

Let us see how briefly and convincingly we can do it.

The Charlestown Navy Yard should be retained for the historical reason that it was the first and is the oldest naval station in America.

It should be retained for the efficient reason that it has the ablest naval artisans and mechanics in the world.

It should be retained for the economic reason that the national government should preserve, not waste, the many millions of dollars invested in its establishment.

It should be retained for the military reason that it is the key to the defenses of the populous and rich Northeast, the first area in this country that would be sought to be destroyed by an alien enemy.

It should be retained for the patriotic reason that preparation for war is the best agency in actual peace.

There is no reason for abandoning it except "economy," and that is not a reason; it is a paltry and unpatriotic excuse.

Captain O'Donnell

He typified the sturdy strength and brave legends of New England's maritime greatness.

From deck boy on a tugboat at 16 to Commander and then President of the Eastern Steamship Corporation, his life was an inspiration to our ambitious youth who see the possibility of success in their own sheer ability.

His later years gave him an abundance of satisfaction because he was seeing the realization of his ideal. He was seeing the port of Boston coming slowly but steadily into its own again.

The Dentists Are Coming

Dr. Walter J. Bryans, President, calls our attention to the 59th annual convention of the Massachusetts Dental Society to be held in Boston early next month.

You get some appreciation of the high standing of Boston as a medical and dental center from the fact that 4000 dentists from all sections of the United States and Canada will be attracted here by this convention.

These dentists come to exchange views with one another in order that all may profit from the latest discoveries in the art of dentistry.

Whether you are a dentist or not, you ought to take in some of these meetings, see the clinics, if possible, and hear the discussions. Proper care of the teeth is one of the essentials of good health.

Income Tax Folly

Since 1929 Federal income tax rates have gone up—and the return to the Federal Treasury has gone steadily down.

Note the actual returns to Uncle Sam: Collections of $2,410,986,977 in 1930, then down to $1,860,394,295 in 1931 and $1,057,335,853 in 1932.

This fiscal year is not complete. But with the oppressive "soak-the-rich" rates in full effect, only $567,825,557 had been taken in up to April 6—and the year closes on June 30.

The 1933 collections will be perhaps about one-fourth of the 1930 total, when the rate was lower.

The burden falls almost entirely upon the small taxpayer with his hard-earned income. The wealth that Uncle Sam wants to tax escapes into tax-exempt securities.

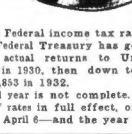
New York Day by Day

Barber Shop Wits

NEW YORK, April 12—A glittery barber shop near the Strand theater is the hopper for many of the street's choicest wise-cracks. Its patronage is largely among song writers, gagmen for vaudeville, revues and movies as well as sundry minds sharpened by the city pavements.



O. O. McIntyre

Many of tomorrow's hilarities are incubated there. Customers include Irving Ceasar, Lew Pollack, Ballard Macdonald, Jack Benny, Lou Holtz, Jack Osterman and others of the crack ad-libbers. The solemn-faced head barber, Bill, is top clown, with a fellow barber, Salvador, as a stooge.

The customary placidity of the average barber shop may in sudden earthquake erupt in a "strolling through the park" formation and an "off to Buffalo" out the door without paying the cashier. Or some wag may sit on a manicure girl's knee in phone his wife he will be late because of a "tough day at the office."

An innocent stranger, wandering in, is often horrified by witnessing a mock stabbing affray at his chair-side. Calls over dead phones will be put in for Hollywood stars while eyes pop at imaginary conversations. It is all incredibly mad, but the exquisite fooling is about the biggest laugh on Broadway.

The one-time target for militant youth's most violent hatred is often seen around the Players. He is Reggie Birch, who created the popular velvet-jacketed and sissie-like conception of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" years ago. Another illustrator who created a wide-world character and is still around is Frederick Steele. He first drew Sherlock Holmes with his plaid deerstalker, wide-awake hat, bulldog pipe and large magnifying glass.

Raymond Hitchcock was the last of the gray bowler wearers until Alfred de Liagre, Jr., a newcomer in theatrical ranks, appeared. He is a Yale man and sports the bowler on ceremonial occasions.

* * *

Another pearl derbyist was the late Tommy Gray, whose mots convulsed the Rialto a dozen years ago, returning from London one autumn so hatted. He was a member of the noonday collection of clowns that knotted at the old Claridge corner. Karl Kitchen and I joined the group one midday and as the late Marcus Loew and Lee Shubert passed in earnest conversation, Tommy looked up, called out quickly: "Hi Lee Hi Loew!" and went on with his light patter.

In driving through a forlorn reach of the Bronx the other evening there were several blocks almost completely abandoned. In the dusk they seemed to be factories of some sort. A policeman explained they were once devoted to manufacturing pianos. "The Radio!" he said, with significant shrug.

* * *

The Bronx, of all boroughs, is mellow with the simplicity of an older period. No other section gives forth such a feeling of laundered permanence. There is the suggestion of neighborliness and incurable passion for old-fashioned beat-the-carpet-in-the-back-yard housekeeping. Oddy enough, about the only writer to use the Bronx as a locale for fiction was young Vina Delmar.

* * *

I noticed John Ringling, tanned and invigorated by his Sarasota Siesta, prowling around the cluster of art galleries in 57th street the other day. "Mister Jawn," as he is known to the big tops, seems in fair fettle for the circus season. A year ago his days were thought numbered.

Frederick Sullens reports Grandma Perkins, 90, as still counting her blessings on Possum Trot Ridge. "Thank the Lord," she told him, "I still have two teeth left and they hit. I can't chaw much on vittles, but I'm right good at tearin'."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Are Wives Good Sports?

ARE YOU a Married Man or a Married Woman?

Wedded long enough to have taken part in the Big Whoopee of '29?

And is your matrimony now suffering from High Blood Pressure? Dizzy spells? Spots before the eyes? Ringing in your ears? Yes—?

Then don't read the following communication!

For I warn you—

What's it about?

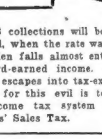
And people who have to move out of swanky duplex apartments into shabby walk-up flats . . . 'n hock their diamond earrings . . . 'n sell their mink coats to raise the price of eats.

So then what?

So then how do they act after they get that way? Particularly—how do Wives act?

For years and years we've been hearing about how brave and loyal wives are under adverse circumstances. Well, we now have the adversiest circumstances anyone could crave. And are the Ladies being the Ministering Angels we've been led to expect?

"NO, THEY'RE NOT!" yells



Elsie Robinson

Mr. James Bennett—and proceeds to provide plenty of peevish proof.

Dear Miss Robinson:

I wonder if a mere man can say a few words about this Depression, and the way some wives are making it practically unbearable for their husbands?

I know, of course, that SOME women are meeting it like good soldiers in a pinch . . . BUT SOME—A WHOLE LOT OF THEM, IN FACT—ARE NOT. Mine is one of these latter kind.

In 1909 we were sitting pretty. I had built up a good business. I had worked hard to give my wife all the comforts I could possibly get for her. We moved in a pretty nice set . . . or so I thought then. They were clever, alert, amusing people. They all had about the same amount of money we had. They could afford nice homes or apartments. They had good clothes, and some good jewelry.

Well, when the crash came, a good many of us were practically wiped out. I wasn't. I hadn't gone in for stock gambling to any great extent and I was lucky enough to get out with most of my skin. But the PARTY was over, and big profits were no more.

It wasn't long before I, as well as the rest of the [illegible] had to retrench. We had to move out of our pretty apartment in a fine building, and into a much cheaper place. TO THE TUNE OF A CONSTANT STREAM OF COMPLAINTS FROM MY WIFE.

Some of the other wives were even worse. Two or three of the men we knew were "caught short" in the stock market, and lost practically everything they had. Others lost their shirts when companies they were in went to the wall. AND THE WOMEN SNARLED AND CALLED THEM FOOLS AND WORSE. BECAUSE OF IT. There was just ONE of them who seemed to sense something of the terrible discouragement her husband was going through, and gave him a few words of cheer.

And mind you, these were folks who were fond of thinking of themselves as Our Best People. The men had worked their heads off, to give their women folks the best they could . . . AND WHEN THEY MET DISASTER, WHAT THANKS . . . WHAT UNDERSTANDING OR ENCOURAGEMENT DID THEY GET TO HELP THEM IN THEIR ZERO HOUR? None!

What do you think? Are women a lot less heroic and sweet than they've set themselves up to be, or what? Personally, I think most of them are bum sports. They could dish it out—and how!—when things were going good—but they can't take it now that times are tough.

James Bennett.

So there you are.

Just Folks

Home-Singing

About the piano we gather once more.
To sing the old songs in the old-fashioned way.
Should young friend or old come to tap on our door,

We've dug out the backs of our favorite songs

Now once more the family's where it belongs,
Perhaps what has happened's a very good thing,

But for years that piano's been idle and still,
And it may be that mother's lost some of the touch

But it's good once again to have rafters that ring
With the laughter and joy of the songs that we sing.
We are home and together, not wandering out
Seeking pleasures afar, and I often declare,

As to sing some old music we gather about,
That we can be merry in spite of our care.
Once more we're united, so let the tune swing.

A Day for All to Observe

'President's Day' Sunday, April 30

A great chapter in American history, clearly destined to mark an epoch, is being written under our very eyes.

The record made by President Roosevelt since his inauguration would be noteworthy almost beyond comparison if it represented the achievements of a full presidential term.

And what a record!

The President has indeed ushered in a new era—a new deal, as he simply and less pretentiously describes his objective.

He has changed the direction of our gaze. As a people we are looking up not down, forward not back.

We are at last aroused from our dangerous acquiescence in practices we knew to be wrong, but doubted our power to curb.

Problems, intricate and great, which have seemed in the past to mock efforts at their solution, have yielded to the clear-brained analysis and the vigorous onset of the President's determination to get on with the task of national reconstruction and to lose no time about it.

The national government has made prodigious gains in popular respect as it has demonstrated the resolve and capacity to be master in its own house.

Quibbling, carilling and all the voices of obstruction have been silenced by the clear, true and authentic note of America which has sounded in the utterances of Franklin Roosevelt.

To set forth the great steps he has taken, the great measures he has formulated, the great reforms he has instituted, although they are the accomplishments of but a single month, would fill many a crowded page.

His restoration of the federal credit; the reduction of powerful and organized minorities to an attitude of proper respect for the national government and for the people as a whole; his far flung attack upon the problems of human relief through direct federal activities and grants of financial aid to localities; his measures of assistance to the distressed owners of homes and small farms; the protection he has afforded hard-pressed debtors from the loss of home and livelihood through the harsh operation of the laws; the stimulation he has given re-employment through great public undertakings financed by the government; the injection into business, and particularly into financial trusteeship, of decent standards of fidelity—these are but some of the things he has accomplished.

Is it strange that a great feeling of admiration and gratitude is welling up in the breasts of Americans?

They see the work of their President and they pronounce it good. They wish him to know that they perceive it and appreciate it.

Throughout the land there is a rising demand that a day be set apart which the people may use to speak their heart to the President who is serving them so well.

They wish him to realize that his people know him—know what he is doing, know what he is overcoming, know what he is resisting—for the good name and credit of the country and for the pride and self-respect of his countrymen.

We have a "Mother's Day" and a "Father's Day." Why should we not have a "President's Day," when the people of this country may repair to their churches and in earnestness and piety give thanks that a man like Roosevelt, with the interests of this country foremost in his heart, is in the White House?

It would be meet and right so to do. Let us not delay. Let us fix the day now, a day soon at hand, when the feelings coursing so strongly in the breasts of Americans can find vent and expression.

Let the day be the Sabbath day—the 30th day of this month of April.

Americans, regardless of party, wish to express the gratitude they feel for what their President has accomplished and for what he has pledged himself to do in the future for their welfare.

And they wish, in all devoutness, to utter their prayers that he may have health and strength to carry to completion all that he so beneficently plans.

Time for Speed

Fechner Says Aid for Jobless Too Slow

Robert Fechner, from his sick bed in Washington, declares that President Roosevelt's program to put 250,000 idle men at work in the forests is moving altogether too slowly.

The admission is frank and convincing because Mr. Fechner happens to be in charge of the serious task of making this program effective and successful.

Only 2600 men have been sent to the Army training camps for "conditioning," preparatory to their advance upon the forests, and yet we expect to have 250,000 men at work by May 15th.

President Roosevelt has manifested a healthy distaste for bureaucratic red tape since he entered the White House.

If red tape could be slashed in favor of the banks and bankers, certainly he does not want it to bind our people who are out of work with utterly no source of income for themselves and their families.

This is the time for speed. It is not the time for this foil de rol of sorting out the applicants for work according to height, weight, the color of their eyes and the breadth of their chests as if they were being measured for prizes like poultry at a county fair.

You can get some appreciation of the needs of these men and their eagerness for work from the fact that 20,000 applied alone at the registration bureau in Boston.

Fechner complains against the delay. The bureaucrats had better heed his complaint ere President Roosevelt takes the matter into his own hands. Once he starts to bear down, they will find there can be a great deal of righteous indignation behind that pleasant smile of his.
